Paraguay and Bolivia Mass Troops in Hope of Major Victory.

55,000 Men Ready For Big Conflict

Artillery Is Concentrated for Clash; Air Force Harries Infantry.

Asuncion, Paraguay, May 21 (AP).—Heavy fighting broke out on two sectors of the Chaco front today while the Bolivian and Paraguayan armies massed across a mile-wide plain at Fort Ballivian for what many believe will be the decisive battle of the jungle war.

Communiques given out in the capitals of each of the warring countries today announced clashes for possession of the fiercely contested "strongest" and "Canada" zones. Neither mentioned initiation of the major conflict which has been brewing for weeks at Fort Ballivian.

A Paraguayan announcement declared conditions in the regions where fighting is going on were "highly favorable" to the Paraguayan troops. The Bolivian communique said the Paraguayans had achieved "no result" in an offensive.

Forty thousand Paraguayan troops are massed along a 25-mile line facing Fort Ballivian. The most formidable array of artillery that has been brought into play since the war started was concentrated there.

The line runs along the edge of the Chaco forests. Between it and the Bolivian fortress is a mile of open ground.

Bolivia has at least 15,000 men in the fortress and entrenched along its sides. Her inferiority in numbers is offsett greatly by the strategic value of the position. The defenders command the entire plain with machine guns and light artillery.

The crucial struggle came near getting under way yesterday when the Bolivians launched a "feeler" attack against the Paraguayan line. They were repulsed with a reported loss of 200.

The Paraguayans rushed final organizing of troops and accumulating of arms and ammunition. Paraguay's most able commander, Col. Franco, is at the front.

Bolivian planes have been attempting to hamper the Paraguayan concentration by swooping down on supply trains and raking them with their machine guns. They also have been carrying out bombing raids back of the Paraguayan line.

Mexico Ousts More Priests

Sonora Churches Closed as Son of Calles Resumes Feud.

Nogales, Ariz., May 21 (AP).—Another controversy involving church and state in Mexico was pushed into the open today by an order of Gov. Rodolfo Elias Calles, of Sonora, closing all Catholic churches in his jurisdiction and expelling priests.

The order was described by Mexican border authorities as the result of friction over state circulars sent recently to educators, civic officials and executives, requesting them to express views against fanaticism in religion.

Several officials resigned as a result of the request, it was said.

Border sources said civil authorities had accused churches and priests with exerting undue influence over the people. This was looked upon as a continuation of the trouble that started several years ago when P. Elias Calles, father of Sonora's Governor, closed many churches.

Thousands of persons were reported to have flocked to the Cathedral in Hermosillo for marriage and baptismal rites when word was spread about of the impending closing. Catholic residents of Nogales, Sonora, began crossing to the American side to worship.

During the incumbency of Calles' father as president, many dignitaries of the church fled to the United States and charged Mexican civil authorities with religious persecution.

Would-Be Dillinger, 16, Denied Bail in Murder

Harlingen, Tex., May 21 (AP).—William Osborne, 16-year-old Fremont High School student who told officers he wanted to become a John Dillinger or Clyde Barrow, was ordered held without bond for the murder of J. M. Brinck, member of the 1928 U. S. Olympic rowing team, at a preliminary hearing in Falfurrias today.

The sheriff said Osborne confessed he shot Brinck to death and robbed him of $70 late Saturday night after Brinck had given him a ride in his automobile, en route from Falfurrias to Edinburg, Tex.

Mystery Bomb Blast Maims Postal Clerk, Injures Messenger

Concealed in a red-leather book addressed to a person believed to be an official in Czecho-Slovakia, a bomb exploded with terrific force in the Dead Letter Division of the City Postoffice yesterday, maiming a postal clerk and slightly injuring a colored messenger.

So violent was the blast that it tore the fingers from the left hand of Myrton L. Genung, 42, of 2316 F street northwest, as he attempted to open the package. The bomb was concealed inside the book, which was small and printed in old English. Genung described it as being 2½ inches wide and 4 inches long.

The blast shattered a window in the room and showered glass fragments over an area of about 12 square feet. Genung rushed from his desk, grasping his shattered hand. He collapsed and was taken

Court Denies Monaco Right To Bond Suit

"Monte Carlo Gamble" to Collect on Mississippi Debt Loses.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As a result of a Supreme Court decision yesterday that a foreign government can not sue an American State without the latter's consent, the principality of Monaco, home of glamorous, gambling Monte Carlo, is holding losing tickets in the form of $100,000 of defaulted Mississippi bonds.

The bonds were part of two issues of securities sold by Mississippi prior to the Civil War to finance the organization of two banks. The bonds went into default at various dates between 1850 and 1866. After years of controversy over the bonds, the State inserted in its constitution a provision outlawing the debt.

In the course of the controversy over the defaulted Mississippi bonds it was held that neither a citizen of Mississippi nor of another State could sue for payment. But the question of whether a foreign government could sue an American State in the Supreme Court had not been decided until yesterday's decision was handed down.

Bonds Were Gift.

The bonds in this case were given as an outright gift to Monaco by

Final Leticia Protocol Ready for Submission

Rio de Janeiro, May 21 (AP).—The final draft of the protocol providing for settlement of the dispute between Peru and Colombia over the border village of Leticia was completed today.

It will be submitted to plenary conference of Peruvian and Colombian representatives, sitting with Alfranio de Mello Franco, Brazilian foreign minister, tomorrow, and plans call for its signature on Thursday.

Beaten Couple Lie Senseless In Park Ditch

Blood-Stained Leaves Bare Fredericksburg Tragedy.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—A man and woman found badly beaten in a gulley near the Fredericksburg Battlefield Park road and less than half a mile from the Richmond-Washington highway late today were still unconscious tonight.

Milton J. Brown, 24, of Fredericksburg, and Fannie Kurz, 21, of Falmouth, are the victims. Both have been badly beaten about the head and face. Blood-stained leaves for more than 20 feet along the narrow gulley, in which they were found, as well as indications of a struggle, led Howard Brown, a cousin of Milton Brown, to the spot where he found the unconscious pair.

When neither of the pair, who left their home last night, had appeared this morning, Howard Brown conducted a search for them and found their car in the battlefield park. He returned home thinking nothing to be wrong. When they still had not appeared at 3 p. m. he began the search, which ended in the discovery of the couple.

A blood-stained handkerchief was found near the spot where they had been discovered. The attempted hold-up of a machine into which a colored man thrust a double-barreled shotgun last night, fleeing at the approach of another car, lead police to believe that Brown and Miss Kurz were attacked by the same man.

Alleged Montreal Killer Caught in San Francisco

San Francisco, May 21 (AP).—Joseph Curreri was ordered held by police today after a telegram was received from Ferdinand du Fresne, president of the police at Montreal, saying the man allegedly was one of five who killed a bank messenger at Montreal several years ago.

Heat Hits 95 for Year's High Before Showers Cool Off City

A new heat high for the year was made and broken yesterday as belated thunder showers caused the mercury to drop from 95 degrees in midafternoon to more comfortable temperatures at dusk.

One prostration occurred when George Locke, 29, of 1324 S street, fainted while playing golf at Potomac Park. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

A shirt-sleeve spectacle was presented as coats were carried over shoulders by persons returning home at the end of the day's work. Bench space was at a premium when persons sought relief in the squares.

A freakish bolt of lightning that glanced from a nearby oak tree to the gable of the residence of Judge A. R. Wilson, 15 Sycamore street, Takoma Park, Md., caused serious alarm, but little damage. The bolt ripped shingles from the roof and split heavy beams. No one was injured, but a dog on the porch was knocked down.

In Baltimore, where the thermometer went Washington's 1 degree better, six men were overcome and a 17-year-old boy was drowned in the harbor as he sought escape from the torridity.

Charles Kermas, of South Patterson Park avenue, Baltimore, dived from a scow at the foot of Aliceanna street and upon regaining the surface shouted, "I'm drowning." Two companions tried unsuccessfully to save him.

Yesterday, the hottest May 21 on record in Baltimore, came within 2 degrees of equaling the hottest May day ever recorded there.

Fair and warm, with relief by more thunder showers at nightfall, is the Weather Bureau's forecast for here today.

Scores Hurt As Rioters Fight Police

Walkout in Minneapolis Joined by 35,000 Builders.

Minneapolis, May 21 (AP).—An army of 35,000 carpenters, bricklayers and other building trades workers tonight went on strike in sympathy with 5,000 truck drivers who have enforced an embargo on commercial trucking here since last Tuesday night.

The walkout of building workers became effective at 5 p. m., at the close of a day which saw bloody rioting in the City Market in which 18 officers and 19 strikers were injured.

New negotiations were begun by the Regional Labor Board under authority from Washington, and with the power to call in the Department of Justice to enforce rulings.

The strike was termed a "struggle against the tyranny of the branch banks and the Citizens Alliance" in a statement issued by A. H. Urtebees, president of the Central Building Trades Council.

Dictatorship Is Charged.

"The West Hotel meeting Friday (a mass meeting of local business men to seek means to break the strike) was connived and arranged by those banking interests that so outrageously mulcted the public in the sale of branch banking stock," the statement went on.

"A handful of financiers wished to set up a dictatorship of poverty for the workers of the City of Minneapolis and the farmers of the State. * * * It is this dictatorship which precipitated the strike and prevents it from being settled by preventing employers who wish to settle from reaching an accord with the union through their control of credit. It is against this dictatorship that we call upon all farmers and workers to struggle.

Five hundred striking truckmen rioted today in the city market. More than two score of their number and policemen reddened pavements with their blood as the city's strike, marked by the arrest of a Minnesota congressman, threatened to widen.

The surging mass in the narrow district bristled with riot guns, clubs, sticks and knives.

Olson May Call Out Guard.

Gov. Floyd B. Olson, reiterating his appeal for the employers to arbitrate, was represented as seriously considering calling out the National Guard immediately to restore order and supervise distribution of produce.

Thomas Seized, Speech Banned

Socialist Rally in Illinois Broken Up by Gas; Minister Held.

Taylorville, Ill., May 21 (AP).—Sheriff's deputies took Norman Thomas, Socialist party leader, into custody today, prevented him from making a speech on the Christian County Courthouse lawn, and three tear-gas bombs into a crowd which gathered to hear him.

The Rev. Douglas Anderson, of nearby Illiopolis, a Methodist minister who is a candidate for Congress on the Socialist ticket, also was taken into custody.

Thomas, Socialist candidate for President in 1932, had been invited here by members of his party who have been active in the prolonged war for supremacy between rival mine unions for two years.

Reports said four tear-gas bombs were thrown from the upper windows of the courthouse.

Deputy Sheriff Joseph Betterton took charge of Thomas, but it was not made clear immediately why it was done.

President, Wife Pose For Family Portrait

President and Mrs. Roosevelt got up from the dinner table last night and went into the oval room to have their pictures painted.

John Johansen, who dined with them, had to leave blank spaces in the painting which he will fill in later with the faces and figures of the members of the Roosevelt family who were out of town.

One Dead, Another Hurt In Texas Plane Crash

Sherman, Tex., May 21 (AP).—A cross-country plane trip ended today with the death of Mortimer Riley, 21, of Hewlitt, Long Island, and the serious injury to another student of a Dallas flying school, W. M. Curry, 22, of Wichita, Kans.

The plane crashed near the airport here. Riley died three hours later in a hospital. Curry suffered a broken back, a leg fracture and crushed skull.

Mortgages In Drought Area Halted

Will Provide Farmers With Forage Also, Says Hopkins.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration said yesterday it would force a two-year moratorium on live stock mortgages in an effort to aid droughth-stricken farmers.

Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins conferred with President Roosevelt and assured him that all demands for drought aid could and would be met

"We are going ahead head-on," he said.

Later he disclosed that creditors holding mortgages on live stock in the drought area where the FERA is supplying feed must formally agree to stay foreclosure for two years or the relief organization will no longer feed the stock.

Fifteen Days' Grace.

"The alternatives for the mortgagees are either to provide feed for the stock to keep it alive, or to foreclose," Hopkins said. "If foreclosure is made on live stock essential to the independent self-support of needy farmers, the FERA will undertake to supply such necessary work stock, poultry and milk cows in its rural rehabilitation program. We shall allow 15 days for creditors and mortgagees to make arrangements for agreements to withhold foreclosure."

Hopkins said he did not intend to feed drought-hit live stock if they were to be taken away from a farmer as soon as they were in good condition. He added that he believed mortgage holders would agree to the plan, since "it is to the best interests of all concerned that the farmer be permitted to remain on the farm to have a chance to work out his problem."

No Cattle Bought Yet.

Although his organization and the AAA have been working on a plan to buy cattle in the drought areas as a relief measure, no live stock has yet been bought, Hopkins said. He said he hoped the program would be under way this week.

Hopkins said that from $3,500,000 to $4,000,000 already has been spent for drought aid. Wisconsin yesterday was given $2,500,000 for general relief expenses in May, including drought aid.

The administration asserted all sections of the drought area needing help will get it, and that he was willing to take a chance on $1,000,000 or more for forage seed in the hope that rain would come in time to bring up a crop. Meanwhile, he indicated, the Government is making its arrangements to start further aid in motion, concentrating on the three-point program of taking out live stock providing farm families with work relief, and providing forage seed.

Employers Face Cells for Firing NRA Informers

Jail sentences and fines for employers who dismiss or demote workers complaining to NRA were made possible yesterday by President Roosevelt in an Executive order.

The President ruled any employer who acted against dissatisfied employes for protesting or giving evidence concerning code violations would be subject to six months' imprisonment and a $500 fine.

His order was inspired by numerous complaints of workers in cases before the National Labor Board that they were penalized for bringing to light noncompliance with codes.

It long has been the policy of NRA to withhold from employers the names of workers voicing criticism.

Duncan Renaldo Faces Jail Term

Perjury Case Appeal Lost by Film Star.

Los Angeles, May 21 (AP).—Duncan Renaldo, tall, brown-eyed screen hero, lost today his fight to keep out of the Federal Penitentiary.

The United States Supreme Court denied the actor's petition for a review of the case, in which he was convicted here on charges of perjury in connection with application for a passport, and sentenced to two years at the McNeil Island Penitentiary.

Renaldo asserted he was born at Camden, N. J., April 23, 1904, but the Government contended he was born in Rumania and had not been naturalized. He may be deported after serving the sentence.

Pond and Sabelli Intend To Enter Australian Hop

Lahinch, Irish Free State, May 21 (AP).—Forced into inaction as repairs are made on their transatlantic monoplane, Capt. George Pond and Lieut. Cesare Sabelli made plans today to enter the coming race from London to Melbourne, Australia.

The fliers first, however, will carry out their project of visiting Rome and then flying back to New York from Ireland, Capt. Pond said.

Turmoil Tires 'Ghost' Of Darrow's Report

Charles Edward Russell, Socialist, Has Spent Life Crusading.

By Felix Bruner.

The "noted Socialist," who Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel says was selected to write the Darrow report, is a little, wrinkled, active man only three years younger than Clarence Darrow himself. His name is Charles Edward Russell.

By profession Russel is a writer, and a prolific one. He has published more than a score of books, including poetry, biography, philosophy, history and economics. He was awarded the Pulitzer prize for biography in 1927. He has written hundreds of magazine articles. He is an active Socialist.

The present ambition of this "noted Socialist" is to get away from "material things" and go to Switzerland to a place he knows on the shore of Lake Geneva and "just live." He intends to do just that within a few weeks. He thinks all the turmoil and confusion in the United States and elswhere is a "hopeless mess" and he wants nothing more to do with it.

Russell was very much in evidence at the Darrow headquarters at the Willard yesterday, as he has been since the committee was organized. He presented the appearance of an overworked, yet calm, office manager. He was trying to answer two telephones at the same time, explain to six rather

Merchants Map Traffic Safety Drive

Education Campaign Is Planned to Reduce Accident Rate.

With traffic fatalities mounting, Washington merchants, in cooperation with police and traffic officials, yesterday laid plans for a safety campaign designed to reduce the accident rate. The campaign closely follows revelation by The Post of the fact that there have been twice as many traffic deaths thus far this year than during the same period last year.

The purpose of the campaign is to bring each traffic regulation to the individual attention of autoists, so that there will be no excuse for accidents due to ignorance of the laws and regulations.

First steps in the educational drive were taken at a meeting of the Transportation Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, at which George E. Kneipp, committee chairman, outlined a plan which, the committee agreed, if carried out successfully, with the cooperation of motorists and police, should bring about a marked reduction in accidents.

Provisions of Plan.

The plan includes the following:

Concentrate traffic enforcement in areas where there are the greatest number of accidents.

Tests for drivers to be made more rigid with strict examination of applicants' eyesight.

Better enforcement of traffic lane rules.

Psychological tests for drivers.

Inclusion in the District appropriation bill of an item providing for better street lighting facilities.

Meanwhile, reports were being circulated that William A. Van Duzer was about to be removed as traffic director. Van Duzer said he

Pennsylvania Airlines Sues Postal Chief

Pennsylvania Airlines, Inc., filed a suit in District of Columbia Supreme Court yesterday to compel Postmaster General James A. Farley to rescind his order of February 9, canceling all commercial air-mail contracts.

The airline, a subsidiary of Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation in which the family of Andrew W. Mellon is financially interested, had a contract for the Washington-Cleveland route, which was awarded in 1926.

The suit set forth that the airline had telegraphed President Roosevelt after the cancellation order that it would carry the mails free for 60 days, pending an investigation. If at the end of the period any irregularities were proved, the company would waive payment, the action said.

Damages incurred through the loss of the contract also were asked.

Simultaneously, the Postoffice Department announced it would inaugurate an intensive advertising campaign to get its air-mail system before the public.

The drive was outlined by Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, who used to be a newspaperman. The rapid-talking, bespectacled Georgian said the campaign could get under way Thursday with posters, newspaper publicity and oratory.

He said the cost could be limited to "less than $100,000."

Branch also announced that Eastern Airlines, Inc., whose craft hourly grace the skyline of the Nation's Capital, would extend the route from Newark via Washington into New Orleans this week. The airline was awarded the mail contract for the entire route, but so far is serving only that portion between Newark and Atlanta.

The Pennsylvania Airlines' bill of complaint recited that at the time of the cancellation of the contract, five round trips were being flown daily between Washington and Cleveland by 12-passenger trimotored airplanes.

Broken Dolls, Aching Hearts Remain as 'Pop' Strunkel Dies

By Roy K. Von Lewinski.

And his musket molds in his hands.
But sturdy and stanch he stands;
And the little toy soldier is red with rust
And his musket moulds in his hands;

Goblins and gnomes that have dwelled in the musty corners of Pop Strunkel's doll hospital are disconsolately searching for a new home, for Pop Strunkel, beloved by Washington children for half a century, is dead.

Veteran of his trade, the 75-year-old toymaker, who conducted his basement workshop at 718 H street northwest, has been called to the realm of kobolds and sprites that watched him perform deft feats of surgery on his tiny patients for the last 50 years.

Many a tear-streaked little face has been sent away beaming and many a childish heart has been kept from breaking, when, with a wave of the scalpel, broken remnants of a tattered toy were healed in Pop's place.

Hundreds of dolls, brought to the healer during his last illness, still line the shelves of the little shop, solemnly awaiting the fate of Humpty-Dumpty, for there is no one to take Pop Strunkel's place.

Due to the inroads of machinery, business hadn't been good during the last ten years. Pop could handle all the work himself and never bothered to train an appren-

Admits "Isolated" Cases of Codes Helping Monopolies.

Review Group Hits Delay by President

Pledges "Hotter" Report This Week; Will Be Dissolved Soon.

By Raymond Clapper.

Existence of isolated monopolistic abuses in NRA codes was conceded last night by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in an incisive reply to a new outburst from the Darrow Review Board.

The recovery chief's latest blast followed a warning from the Review Board headquarters earlier in the day of plans to fire a second broadside at NRA.

Johnson blamed the raging controversy over monopolistic trends in NRA on Clarence Darrow's "camp followers" rather than on the noted attorney and his fellow board members. Johnson referred to Darrow as "a grand old man."

"The report is simply dogma," he added. "Perhaps there are some monopolistic abuses of the codes. If so, we want to know them, but there are no monopolistic codes.

Wanted Specific Cases.

"I collaborated in forming this board because I thought they would point out specific evils that we could correct. Mr. Darrow assured me that this was exactly his idea. If we had had only Clarence Darrow and the original board to deal with, we would have seen some real constructive action. It was the camp followers who came in later that made the trouble."

As a parting shot, Johnson commented:

"In short, the question is: 'Are there monopolistic practices and oppressions of the little fellow under the codes, and if so, where?' * * * That is what we wanted the review board to tell us. * * * All it has done is to render a conjectural opinion on insufficient and improper evidence, to emit a sociological essay, and to conclude that the only hope of the country is the Socialism of Karl Marx and Soviet Russia."

The new Darrow report will deal with additional codes which have been under investigation, probably

Norris Saves Electoral Bill

Changes Vote, to Call Up Reconsideration in Senate Today.

Senator Norris (Republican) Nebraska, late yesterday served notice in the Senate that he would call up today a motion to reconsider the vote by which his constitutional amendment abolishing the electoral college was defeated.

The Nebraskan is convinced that two-thirds of the Senate favor his proposal, especially since he amended it to make it necessary for a successful candidate for the Presidency to have a clear majority of the State unit votes, instead of at least 35 per cent, as originally proposed.

The amendment, which was debated last week, came up for a vote in the Senate yesterday before debate on the tariff bill was resumed. Only 66 Senators answered the roll call, many of those absent being ignorant that a vote was being taken so early in the day.

The roll call result stood at 43 for submission of the amendment to the States and 23 opposed, one short of the necessary two-thirds majority. Norris hurriedly changed his vote before the vote was announced in order to be in a position to move reconsideration.

Submission of the amendment was supported by 33 Democrats and 8 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite. It was opposed by four Democrats and 20 Republicans, including Norris. The Republicans favoring the amendment were Borah, Couzens, Cutting, Frazier, Norbeck, Nye, Robinson of Indiana, and Schall. Democrats opposing it were Connally Dietrich, Smith and Thomas of Oklahoma.

$20,000 Extortion Note Nets 10 Years in Prison

Cheyenne, Wyo., May 21 (AP).—Orson de Witt Demmon, 55, Niobara County rancher, was sentenced today to 10 years in Federal prison for attempting to extort $20,000 from Mrs. Sarah Morton, widow of a Converse County sheepman, on threat of harming her two sons.

Demmon pleaded guilty to sending the extortion letter through the mails.

Philip Giddens Divorced.

Reno, Nev., May 21 (AP).—Philip Harris Giddens, New York artist and architect, was divorced by Mrs. Blanche R. G. Giddens at a private trial here today. She charged cruelty. They were married in New York May 25, 1925.

Codes Foster Monopoly, Hit Weak, Says Nye

Senator Expects White House to Move for NRA Reforms.

Editor's Note: The Darrow report substantiates the need for sweeping reform in NRA, according to Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota. Nye was instrumental in having the National Review Board set up. Indirectly he named the members. Nye in the following article sets forth his views on the hotly disputed report.

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

An outstanding feature of the Darrow report is the discovery that both the majority and minority findings are that NRA codes are working real hardship on the little man and are fosteringly monopoly.

Since so much effort has been made to indicate there was strife in the committee, this point is of double interest and importance.

President Roosevelt repeatedly has delared it is to be his purpose to aid and encourage the small business man. In light of the findings of the Review Board and which I believe are concurred in by the Department of Justice and the Federal Trad Commission, I would expect now to see the President move in the direction that would accomplish the sweeping reform which has been so long called for in the NRA.

Wholesale Change Urged.

This reformation should take the shape of wholesale revision of codes which would give the small business man larger influence and voice in shaping code policies and in representation on code authorities.

The Darrow report confirms the contention offered on the floor of the Senate last January that code authorities were being packed to the detriment of small busines and that monopoly had moved in and possessed itself of the machinery of the NRA to such a degree as makes that part of the "New Deal" nothing mor than the "greed deal" in a new dress.

There is now very large evidence of th need of continuous effort by a review board to remain divorced from the NRA and to study codes from the standpoint of smaller business enterprises and to guard against further entrenchment of monopoly.

The President declared many months ago that business had never been known to purge itself of its own iniquities. The personnel of the Federal Trade Commission is such as causes me to firmly believe that a far larger voice in the making of codes should be exercised by that commission.

Intemperate Language Charged.

Through this commission, the Government and the American consumer would have far better protection and representation than they have through the agencies of the NRA.

The very intemperate language resorted to by Gen. Johnson, Donald Richberg and other higher ups in the NRA in their response to the Darrow report, is only one more example of the manner in which base injustice through codes has been covered up through months of controversy that prevailed respecting certain codes.

I have not had the opportunity to give careful study to each section of the NRA response, but if the reply to the Darrow report's charges on the movie code is an example, then the response must be a masterpiece of evasion and confusion.

The Darrow report can not be delegates to the scrap heap by the NRA through the use of vicious adjectives. It cites the need of changes in many codes. Executives of the NRA have promised that some changes would be made to relieve the pressure on the little man and the consumer.

Six months have elapsed since these promises were given to us. No changes have been made. They probably never will be made so long as the present NRA policy prevails.

had no knowledge of any plan for his removal.

Reports of the traffic director's replacement followed recent adoption of a commending report by the Chamber of Commerce transportation committee. It read in part:

Van Duzer Praised.

"The committee considers itself fortunate in having as an adviser Mr. Van Duzer, the director of traffic. His long experience in traffic regulation, coupled with his engineering experience, makes his advice invaluable. Washington is fortunate in having as its traffic director a man of such exceptionally high qualifications and ability."

At the transportation committee meeting yesterday William C. Miller, president of the chamber, lauded the traffic directors work and urged solution of the "dangerous, costly and irksome conditions of the downtown parking ban."

"Vanduzer," he said, "is doing his best to remedy the traffic situation."

Traffic deaths in Washington up to May 1 totaled 41, as compared with 34 in the same period last year. Last year one person out of ever 127 in Washington was hurt in a traffic accident. This year the injury rate has continued about the same. Gasoline tax figures show that many more miles are being covered by automobile this year than last. Officials point to this fact, with the resulting congestion, as a possible cause for increased fatalities.

including lumber, petroleum and motor vehicle retailing, and will be submitted to the White House later this week.

Stung by the indignant retorts of NRA officials to its first report, the Darrow board issued a sizzling statement in which it pointed a thrust directly at the White House, reflecting its presentment at the way its report had been held up, while Gen. Johnson was given opportunity to analyze it and make a simultaneous reply.

"We hope that in common fairness the next report will not be held 17 days to give these young gentlemen (of NRA) a chance to read into it things that it does not contain and to pervert its meaning by placing things out of their context," the board said.

Board's Dissolution Seen.

Although the board has hearings scheduled through June 14, the White House indicated it expected the Darrow Board would dissolve about May 31 in accordance with an earlier understanding. Gen. Johnson recommended its immediate abolition. The White House indicated yesterday it believed the board could conclude its work by the end of the month and dissolve as a matter of course.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, who was instrumental in forcing creation of the Darrow board and had a leading hand in naming its members, was preparing to discuss the report in the Senate today.

Comment generally was cautious, with a tendency to lean toward Gen. Johnson's side. This was due largely to the socialistic alternative which Darrow set up in his supplemental report. When the veteran criminal lawyer asserted in his special report that the country was faced with a choice between Government-sponsored monopoly and a planned economy which required socialized ownership and control, he closed the door to any broad political support for his case.

Vehemence Hurts Case.

In addition to this, the vehemence, the rage, epithets and bad feeling on both sides have so completely crowded out calm, reasoned, factual presentation of the opposing cases that the controversy has lost much of its force and is declining to the level of an official brawl.

The Darrow board, at a meeting yesterday, agreed to issue as a board statement a caustic answer to Gen. Johnson and Donald R. Richberg, NRA counsel, both of whom took violent exception to the board's criticisms of monopolistic tendencies in NRA. This board statement was partly couched in first person language, with no indication as to the identity of the author.

"The monopolists and profiteers that were uncovered by the Review Board's report had their innings today and, with their attorneys, paid and unpaid, filled the air with their clamors," the board's statement said. "When they pause to take breath and reason has a chance to be heard, it may be well to remind the public of certain basic facts totally and no doubt intentionally disregarded in these infuriated clamors."

Holds Small Industry Oppressed.

The statement said that the board had reached conclusions that monopolistic practices existed in certain industries and that in certain of them small enterprises were oppressed.

"Seventeen days later its report is made public, together with the excited ejaculations of Gen. Johnson and Mr. Richberg, who, apparently under the impression that the National recovery act is their personal property, break into shrieks of rage at the suggestion that operations are not perfect or are susceptible of improvement."

The statement asserted that the NRA replies contained no rational conclusion as to the findings of the board concerning monopolies, continuing:

"It is too much to expect that in Mr. Richberg's state of turbulent emotion he should see the essential fact about anything, but to those still preserving an empire over their intellectual processes it will be perfectly plain at once that the chaotic competition condemned by this board is the identical thing that NRA seeks to eliminate and that the suggestions made in our report are all to the good of that planned control he is hired to defend.

Richberg "Uninformed."

"It would be easy, if it were worthwhile, to go through Mr. Richberg's excited periods and show that in every instance it is he who is 'uninformed,' he that speaks of what he does not know, he that misstates and he that stumbles. This board at present has more serious business in hand and business that will have a peculiar interest for Mr. Richberg. It expects to deliver before the end of this week a second report reviewing additional industries in which conditions are even worse than in those that have fevered Mr. Richberg's vision.

"When his perturbed soul has regained its calm, if ever, I will venture two suggestions to him. First, it is exceedingly unseemly for a man occupying a public position in this country to assume that the Nation is his personal property and any criticism of any national activity is a personal affront. There is nothing in a democracy that is above criticism, not even NRA, and if there could be democracy would cease to exist. Second, I should advise him to keep together and well in hand his staff of expert evasionists. When he comes to read the next report of this board it is likely that he will need more than 157 pages to steer around its contents.

"We hope also that in common fairness, the next report will not be held 17 days to give these young gentlemen a chance to read into it things that it does not contain and to pervert its meaning by placing things out of their context. If that is to be done, we shall insist that at the same time opportunity be given to us to answer Mr. Richberg's misstatements, correct his errors and at least try to draw his attention to the realities of the issues involved.

Queries Administration.

"Finally, one question: Does the administration wish to be understood as supporting monopolies?

"The strange course pursued in regard to this report and some of the explosions from the General and Mr. Richberg might be deemed to justify such a thought. And if the small enterprises, whose grievous complaints by the thousands are in the files of this board, can not look to their government for relief, where shall they turn?"

Senator Nye, one of the sponsors of the board, said "it will take more than a few high sounding adjectives by Gen. Johnson and Mr. Richberg to scrap the Darrow report."

Senator Borah said he was interested in getting the antitrust laws restored and did not wish to be sidetracked by a controversy between Darrow and Johnson.

"I have an abundance of facts in my own files," he said, "which leads me to believe there is no doubt whatever that small business is being destroyed and that monopoly is operating under these codes to the great disadvantage of the consumer."

G. O. P. Leader Hits "Autocracy."

Chairman Hastings, of the Republican Senatorial campaign committee, said that if the Darrow board is to be abolished, as recommended by Gen. Johnson, "then Congress owes it to the people of the Nation to set up a board on its own account to keep the people advised as to how a real autocracy operates in this country."

House Majority Leader Byrnes said: "Let Darrow and Johnson fight it out. I don't want to know anything about it."

Senator Dickinson (Republican), of Iowa: "The report sustains the conclusion that the recovery act is impractical. I don't agree with the conclusions about Socialism."

Senator Fess (Republican), of Ohio: "The report bears out the general idea that monopoly is developed under the NRA."

Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky: "I don't agree with the Darrow remedy of Socialism, but I do feel that some changes will have to be made."

AAA Changes Win Committee In 9-to-3 Vote

One Amendment Has Hard Test Awaiting It on Senate Floor.

(Associated Press.)

Administration approved amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act were favorably reported yesterday by the Senate Agriculture Committee, but at least one of the proposed changes has a severe test awaiting it on the Senate floor.

The vote was reported by committee members as 9 to 3. Senators McNary (Republican), Oregon and McGill (Democrat), Kansas were two of those in opposition, but there was disagreement as to which Senator cast the third, negative ballot.

Several committee members also reserved the right to oppose—once the bill reached the floor—the amendment which would give the Secretary of Agriculture power to tell the farmer who enters into a voluntary production control program what he may plant for market on all his land.

This is the section which apparently will encounter the strongest opposition, but other changes which strengthen or clarify the Secretary's power to license industries handling farm commodities are also slated for thorough discussion.

McGill said he voted against the measure because of the clause extending the Secretary's power to tell the grower what he may or may not produce for sale.

At present, the secretary may dictate the use of the land rented or leased by the Government but any attempt to allot production on his entire acreage, McGill said, would be contrary to the spirit of the present law.

Farm Administration officials seek the extension of power to prevent, for example, an increase in feed crops in the South, where land is being taken out of cotton, which would upset their program designed to adjust live stock and dairying supplies.

Industries handling agricultural commodities termed the changes in the Secretary's licensing powers as dictatorial, but the amendments were modified only slightly by the committee.

Farm officials contend they have the power at present to license handlers of farm commodities and tell them what portions of crops covered by marketing agreements they may buy and that the amendments were sought for "clarification" and to prevent delays through court proceedings.

Mae Murray Biffs Attorney as Court Rules Against Her

New York, May 21 (U.P.).—Mae Murray, the former Follies girl who turned film star and married one of the Midvani princes, slapped a lawyer in Supreme Court today.

Miss Murray had just lost a $300,000 suit against Tiffany Productions, Inc., in which she alleged violation of a contract to remit 25 per cent of net profits on eight pictures she made for them.

After the decision had been announced, Bertram A. Mayers, attorney for Tiffany, leaned forward and whispered something to the actress. She gave him a resounding slap on the cheek.

A court attendant said Mayers had whispered: "Now you got justice."

"God will attend to you," Miss Murray said to Mayers after the slap.

of 1,500 regulars and special policemen deputized to snuff out disorders arising from demands of drivers for recognition of their union and adjustment of conditions of employment. Seventy-five strikers were arrested today.

One policeman was stabbed, a striker was believed to have suffered a fractured skull, and the injured taxed the capacity of one hospital in the riot that broke out soon after the arrest of Representative Francis H. Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota.

Shoemaker, whose troubles with the law here and in Washington, D. C., have attracted widespread attention, was carrying a broom handle and was without tie or coat when he ignored orders to move on at the market place.

He was taken to headquarters and charged with disorderly conduct.

Law Wins in Hour's Fight.

Fighting broke out shortly afterward. Within an hour the law strode the field victorious; the striking truckmen had retreated—some to hospitals, others a few blocks distant, and the remainder to strike headquarters.

Hopes were expressed for a truce.

At least 18 policemen and 19 strikers were injured before the melee was quelled. Not a truck moved out of the market area.

Simultaneously with withdrawal of most of the pickets, some of whom wore football headgear as protection from policemen's nightsticks, strike headquarters announced men had been stationed throughout the city to report any effort by employers to move trucks.

All Police Ordered Out.

Police vacations were canceled and all men were ordered by Chief of Police Michael Johannes to report for duty immediately. The Fifth District American Legion was asked to recruit 1,500 members as special officers.

Hatfield Asks Trade Treaty Be Sent Senate

Columbia Pact, Meant as Model, Must Be Seen, He Asserts.

(Associated Press.)

The model treaty the State Department has worked out for trade relations with Colombia was demanded in the Senate yesterday by Senator Hatfield (Democrat), West Virginia, in a renewal of debate on the Administration's tariff bill. Hatfield said he would introduce a resolution today calling for the State Department to submit the treaty to the Senate.

He said he had been informed of such an agreement by Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, who helped wraft the bill.

He said he also understood the Department had a tacit agreement with Germany upon which lard and dyes would be exchanged.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, opposing the Administration which would grant President Roosevelt power to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with other nations without the necessity of Senate ratification, joined in calling for the Colombian treaty.

Pact Designed As Model.

The treaty has been designated as a model on which treaties with 27 nations are expected to be drafted by the State Department.

Hatfield said he was demanding the enjoyment of Senatorial rights that were provided by the Constitution.

"This country can not enter into any treaty until it has been approved by two-thirds of the Senate," Hatfield said, "and yet if a resiprocal tariff bill is passed this treaty can be placed in effect without its submission to the Senate.

"That is unconstitutional and I am going to demand a showdown."

Agreement Thought Satisfactory.

He said so far as he knew the treaty was satisfactory to the Senate.

Meanwhile, Senator Fess, of Ohio, assistant Republican leader, assailed the bill in a speech that took up most of the day. He seaid it would "scuttle the Republic and set up a political or an economic dictatorship."

Leaders on both sides agreed a final vote was possible by Friday night.

The Ohioan said the bill denied to domestic industries "fair warning of contemplated changes" in tariffs, threatened labor with "sudden dislocation and unemployment," aggravated the "unrest of our citizens" and intensified the "dangers inherent in tariff bargaining."

Other Nations' Improvement Seen

He said economic improvement had been greater in countries first hit by the depression and "unhindered by artificial stimuli." He presented figures compiled by the League of Nations to show that the United Kingdom, Japan, Belgium, France and Germany had all shown a greater percentage of recovery than the United States.

"It would appear therefore," he argued, "that what we need at this time in America, instead of resorting to the laboratory of experimentation, is a calm appraisal of National and international conditions and an abandonment of the prevalent practice of citing an emergency as the reason for unprecedented experiments in legislation, as the sine quoa non of economic recovery."

disgruntled newspapermen that there had been some misunderstanding about the time of a press conference, and explaining to everybody that Clarence Darrow could not be disturbed. Privately, he declared Darrow was taking a nap.

Russell, between telephone calls and talks with callers, was asked if he had written the Darrow report.

"You are trying to interview me," he smiled. "I won't be interviewed. I didn't have much to do with that report.

"I don't have any official position. I'm not in public life. I don't want any office. I haven't anything to sell. I don't like personal advertising."

Just a Friend.

"But Richberg says you were selected to write the report and there is a general impression that you did," he was told.

Russell smiled.

"I'm not a friend of Darrow," he said. "He asked me to help him. I'm here to look after him. You know his health is not as good as it might be and I'm looking out for him."

Russell was interrupted with a message that Senator Nye was coming to see Darrow, and should Darrow be disturbed?

"I guess he'll have to be if Nye wants to see him," Russell said.

To a photographer he explained that maybe Darrow would consent to having his picture taken in an hour.

To the interviewer he said: "Stick around as long as you like. But nobody is interested in what I think of things and I am not going to talk."

He refused to amplify his statement that he didn't have "much to do with the report.

To persons familiar with some of the things Russell has written, portions of the report at least "sound like him." The volume of the report also "looks like him." He has written millions of words in his long life as a reporter, editor, author and propagandist.

Attack on Competition.

Richberg called attention to this statement in the report:

"All competition is savage, woolfish and relentless, and can be nothing else. One may as well dream of making war ladylike as of making competition fair."

In 1910 Russell wrote a book called "Why I Am a Socialist." He revised it in 1915 after the opening of the World War. The entire book is an argument against competition. Opposition to competition has occupied much of Russell's time for years. In the book he says:

"They (the Socialists) have averred that competition produces war, causes national antagonism, spreads hatred and prevents international peace and good wil. They have pointed out that competition not only makes war, but Competition is War. (The capitals are Russell's). At one time it is war expressed in the truggle of two railroad companies for the traffic from which they make their dividends. At another time it is war expressed in the struggle between two nations for colonies and markets where surplus products can be placed. But at all times it is War."

The contradictory statement in the report as quoted by Richberg certainly does not agree with the Russell philosophy expressed in his writings. The statement was: "A return to th eantitrust laws for the purpose of restoring competition we believe to be one of the great needs of the times."

Russell's Philosophy.

Russell's philosophy and much of the philosophy of the Darrow report is summed up in a paragraph from "Bolshevism and the United States," written by Russell in 1919. Russell, by the way, is violently opposed to Bolshevism as it existed in Russia of that date.

Russell said in the book:

"I mean that there ought to be a much fairer distribution of the fruits of industry and a much fairer recognition of labor in government, public affairs, social and political institutions. I mean that in all industry the larger share of the returns should go to those that labor in it and the smaller share of the returns to those that merely invest money in it. At present the basis is all the other way; we shall have to reverse the present basis. I mean also that men who work in any industry ought to have the same voice in the management of that industry as the men that put money into it. And I mean that the producers ought to be represented in every legislative body and every phase of the Government in proportion to their numbers."

Through With Crusade.

In his book, "Why I Am a Socialist," Russell unqualifiedly recommends public ownership and operation of all industry producing necessities. He specifies particularly banks, communication, transportation, coal mines, packing houses, shoe factories, oil wells and refineries.

But Russell says people are not interested in his personal theories and that he is tired of "the whole thing," but he did not indicate that he had retreated from any of his beliefs. He simply indicated that he was through crusading. He said he had written his last book and that he was determined not to write another. The book is called "Bare Hands and Stone Walls," and, though it is autobiographed, it is Socialistic argument.

Russell said he was tired, but he didn't act it. He has done more work in the past 60 years than most men could accomplish in several times that length of time.

Long Newspaper Career.

Russell comes of a crusading family. His ancestors were English. His father, Edward Russell, was an active abolitionist and the author of the amendment to the Iowa constitution giving the colored race the right to vote. Russell was born in Davenport, Iowa, in 1860. His father was a small-town newspaper man. The boy grew up in a print shop.

Then he naturally became a reporter. One job after another took him gradually eastward. He was city editor of the New York World from 1894 to 1897. From 1897 to 1900 he was managing editor of the New York American. From 1900 to 1902 he was publisher of the Chicago American and Examiner.

Then he quit the newspaper business to devote his time to writing. He wrote poetry—published three volumes of it. He crusaded for Socialism year in and year out. In between he wrote about the stage and about music.

Now he says he has done his last job of writing. He doesn't say that last job was the Darrow report, but he doesn't say that it wasn't.

His present address is 2011 I street northwest. Along about the Fourth of July he can be reached in Switzerland.

Bulgar Cabinet Plans New Deal Following Coup

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 21 (AP).—Premier Kimon Gueorguieff and his small cabinet worked today on plans for reorganizing the Bulgarian nation along "authoritative" lines.

The cabinet called in a body on King Boris, whose decrees put the fascist group into power after the bloodless military coup d'etate Saturday.

To emphasize the economy plank of their platform, most of the ministers refused motor transportation and walked to the meeting with the king.

The city was quiet. Not one of the soldiers who occupied public buildings and guarded streets day before yesterday was in evidence.

The premier greeeted newspapermen and photographers on his way to the palace.

"It is our intention," he said, "to give this country a strong, stable government," adding that the purpose of the coup d'etat was "not to change persons, but to change the system."

hTe foreign office, meanwhile, refused to take seriously reports from outside the country that there had been disturbances in Macedonia as a result of the change in government.

tice to carry on his work. Only during the last few months, when his hands grew too feeble, has he called in some of his grandchildren and great-grandchildren to help.

No one ever could take Pop Strunkel's place in the hearts of the children he befriended, who, grown to maturity, have scattered to the far reaches of the earth.

Often, a faint click of the door latch would be followed by a childish treble, explaning the ailments of the treausred plaything. Money was no object. Rag dolls brought rein by ragamuffins, "chairty cases," received the same consideration as the doll delivered by a liveried footman.

Poy Strunkel was born in Front Royal, Va. During his youth he made a hobby of repairing the toys of his playmates. When he came to Washington, his hobby became his profession.

Eleven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren will carry the casket when Pop is buried at Glenwood Cemetery at 2:30 p. m. today.

Services will be held at the home of Mrs. Dick Rogers, a granddaughter, at 710 W street northeast. The Rev. Cornelius Abbott, pastor of the Church of the Good Sheperd, will officiate.

House Speeds Relief Loans To Industries

Action Due on Bill Today; Deposit Guarantee Plan Pressed.

By Robert C. Albright.

Another Administration measure was smoked out of the bucking House Banking Committee yesterday, as the House cleared the way for recovery loans to industry and a one-year extension of the temporary bank deposit guarantee.

dent's request for deposit insurance

Committee action on the Presi- extension followed a favorable report by the Rules Committee on the $440,000,000 loans to industry bill, granting the business relief measure priviledged status on today's House calendar.

Coupled with the Administration's temporary deposit insurance extension was a bank deposit "pay-off" outhorization certainly not sired at the White House.

Compromise Pay-Off Plan.

Represented as a "compromise" between contending "pay-off" factions, this authorizes the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to make loans on frozen bank assets to the limit of about $1,000,000,000.

The same measure increases total individual deposits insured by the temporary plan from $2,500 to $5,000, but Banking Committee members insist the President is ready to accept this change.

The break in the Banking Committee stalemate followed weeks of pressure from House leaders to shake the bills loose from Chairman Henry B. Steagall's tenacious group.

After a White House "carpet" talk last week, the committee obligingly reported the measure making $440,000,000 in Federal Reserve and Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds available for industrial loans.

Yesterday Steagall asked the Rules Committee to call that bill up in the House today. His request was speedily granted.

Omnibus Deposit Bill.

Immediately the Alabaman reconvened his own committee for a vote on the second Administration measure on which action was sought, and as a result a report on the temporary deposit insurance extension was ordered before the House adjourned.

But it will be hard for the President to recognize the simple postponement of permanent features of the deposit insurance law which he requested, in the sweeping omnibus bill reported by Steagall.

Here are a fe wof the things it provides:

Permissive authority for the FDIC to loan or purchase assets of banks closed between December 31, 1929, and January 1, 1934.

Power for the FDIC to expand its funds five times over, swelling them to the neighborhood of $2,000,000,000 by sale of guaranteed debeentures, and authority to loan half that amount on assets of closed banks.

Repeals provision of present law that State banks must be members of the Federal Reserve system by July, 1936, to share in benefits of the permanent deposit guarantee plan, insuring deposits on agraduated scale up to 50 per cent of those in excess of $50,000.

Restaurant Code Declared Ignored

West Virginia Cites "Open Violations."

Charleston, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). Returning from a meeting of directors in Parkersburg, John Hurt, secretary of the West Virginia Restaurant Association, today charged that, excepting in Parkersburg and Charleston, no effort is being made to comply with the NRA restaurant code in West Virginia.

The Restaurant Code Authority, Hurt said, "is without power, there are no teeth in the law, and it does not have funds with which to proceed on investigations of open flagrant violations of the law. The Government says it does not want to put anybody out of business and that's all well and good. Neither do the State association nor the code compliance committee, but what are we going to do? The answer is in Washington, and we can't get one."

The chief violation, Hurt said, is the six-day week.

Appeal Court Upholds Lt. Dennett's Divorce

The action of the District Supreme Court in awarding Lieut. Richard Rodney Dennett, U. S. N., an absolute divorce from Mrs. Margaret Buckley Dennett was affirmed by the District Court of Appeals yesterday.

Mrs. Dennett had challenged the divorce granted her husband on two grounds. She contended he was not subject to the jurisdiction of the local courts because of an alleged residence in New Jersey and that the evidence of alleged misconduct on her part was not sufficient to establish misconduct.

Harbor Police Recover Body of Drowned Man

Harbor Precinct police yesterday recovered the body of Carl King from shallow waters of Georgetown Channel below Lincoln Memorial Bridge. King, who lived at 201 Sixth street northeast, was drowned last Thursday when his canoe capsized.

The body was found by Policemen R. C. Ault and J. W. Kite, patrolling in a motor launch. Search for King was abandoned several hours after his canoe upset. James F. Farr, of 403 C street northeast, was rescued by three colored men following the accident.

to a rest room, then to Casualty Hospital. Bits of jagged glass sprayed H. W. Jackson, a colored messenger boy, cut on both arms. He was given first aid and returned to duty.

Two Others Unhurt.

Besides Genung and Jackson, Charles Kracke, another inspector, and Arthur Phillips, another messenger, were in the room. Both escaped injury.

The blast came suddenly as Genung bent over several packages. It destroyed every article on Genung's desk, and officials were at a loss to determine just what package had contained the bomb. Genung identified the package from his hospital bed last night. Yesterday afternoon physicians were forced to amputate his left hand. His face was badly cut and he suffered a possible brain concussion.

Postal inspectors, led by T. M. Milligan, chief of inspection in the Washington Postoffice, sought to learn the identity of the sender of the package.

Genung, in Washington, since 1917, told his story lest night.

"The package was wrapped in cellophane, and addressed in either a woman's handwriting, or the fine handwriting of a man," asserted Genung, smilingly wanly from the pillows. "I guess I am lucky I wasn't blinded, for you know I've always had trouble with one eye, and that's why they wouldn't let me enlist in the Army in 1917.

"Well, I saw the package was addressed to Czechoslovakia, and I couldn't quite make out the name of the city there, or the name of the person to whom it was addressed.

"I think, however, that the city was Prague. When I came to the book I admired it, because it was pretty, and bound in a red-leather cover. I opened it carefully, and then there was a flash, and I looked down, and I didn't have any fingers any more.

"I rushed toward the door and felt funny and dizzy, and then I guess I fainted. It's funny this should happen to me."

Package Not Properly Sealed.

The book bomb was sent to the Dead Letter Office because it was sealed improperly, B. G. Cowles, superintendent of dead letters and parcels, explained last night. Genung's daily duties consisted of examining packages and letters sent to foreign countries and not complying with the postal regulations.

This is the first time an explosion ever has occurred in the Dead Letter Division here. Postal inspectors, who are handling the investigation, said the blast might be the work of some political crank who was bent on destroying some fancied enemy abroad.

Genung has no relatives in Washington. He has been employed by the Postoffice since 1921 and has a stepmother and stepsister living in Detroit. He is a native of Mears, Mich., which is near Muskegon.

Piece of Battery Found.

When postal inspectors, aided by Lieut. John H. Fowler, ballistic expert of the Police Department, examined what was left of the bomb they found one cell of a small dry battery and a fragment of wire.

The current, released by a trigger when the book was opened, heated the wire which set off the explosion, they said. The charge either was in a dynamite cap or inclosed in a metal container. Searching further, they found no fragment of such a container, and reached the conclusion that the bomb was constructed of dynamite.

Realty Board Fights Federal Home Loans

Private Agencies Couldn't Compete, Baltimore Attorney Says.

(Associated Press.)

Testimony that enactment of the Administration's Housing bill was imperative to ease the "strain" on the Home Owners Loan Corporation was countered yesterday with the assertion that the measure would mean "ruin' 'for many building and loan associations.

In asking the Senate Banking Committee to approve the legislation, John H. Fahey, chairman of the Loan Corporation, told of the flood of applications received from distressed home owners.

He was followed by Harry E. Karr, counsel for the real estate board of Baltimore, who objected particularly to the provisions which would authorize formation of National mortgage associations. He said private agencies were in no position to compete with them.

Fahey said up to May 11 his corporation had received 1,343,194 applications for aid from mortgage-burdened home owners and that the total amount represented by these pleas was $4,300,684,929, or a sum more than double the $2,000,000,000 voted by Congress for home mortgage relief.

Fahey said about 66,000 applications had been rejected and that 32,017 were withdrawn. The loans closed up to May 11, he said, represented $681,052,741.

"That leaves you about 1,600,000 applications to act on?" Chairman Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, asked. The corporation chairman nodded agreement.

Karr said the National mortgage associations proposed by the bill would pay no taxes "even though they are organized for profit" and "that no building and loan association would be able to compete with them."

He opposed also the insurance provisions of the Administration bill and said the additional levies on building and loans associations "would mean liquidation of the majority of our (Baltimore) concerns."

Bar Against Americans In Long Race Lowered

Concessions in the regulations for the MacRobertson England-to-Australia air race next fall which will partially remove bars to American entrants were announced by the National Aeronautical Association here yesterday.

The principal concession made by the British officials in charge of the $75,000 prize race will permit American entrants to file certificates of airworthiness as late as seven days prior to the start of the race, October 20. Entry details formerly were required to be in the hands of officials at London by June 1.

"Clean Record" Bill Is Vetoed

Roosevelt Says Measure Would Hurt Morale of Coast Guard.

President Roosevelt yesterday returned, without his approval, a bill originating in the House which sought to give Joe G. McInerney the status of an honorable discharge from the United States Coast Guard. It was one of a number such vetoes this session.

"The bill is objectionable," the President's message said, "as it would tend to break down the morale of the service and be prejudicial to proper discipline to place the name of a man who had been dishonorably discharged for cause by proper authority, upon the list of honorably discharged members of the Coast Guard on the same plane with those who have rendered faithful service."

Records showed, the President said, that McInerney was discharged December 13, 1902, "by reason of insubordination and language tending toward the destruction of good order and military discipline."

Bishop Conducts Rites For Colored "Mammy"

Bluefield, Va., May 21 (AP).—In his native Giles County on a visit, Bishop John Dills, of Spokane, Wash., at Pearisburg yesterday preached the funeral service for his colored mammy, "Aunt" Charlotte Wells, 99.

Traffic Control Group Studies Safety Plans

Wider Use of Signals to Be Urged Tomorrow at Conference.

Members of the joint committee on uniform traffic control devices yesterday took steps to "take the gamble" out of traffic signals and signs on highways and streets as an added measure of safety and accident prevention.

The committee met to prepare a report to the fourth National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, which opens tomorrow.

The group will propose to the conference that all street intersections where traffic lights are used be provided with at least four light posts or stanchions, one for each corner, so that a light will be clearly visible to the pedestrians as well as to motorists.

The committee decided not to propose pedestrian lights, on the ground thats uch lights might prove confusing. The recommendation also will be made that roadside signs, particularly stop signs at intersections, be made more visible.

Mesages from governors indicated that about 40 States and all the large cities will be represented at the conference. Secretary Roper will open the sessions tomorrow morning.

Message Is Due On Silver Bill

Senate Silverites Expect Roosevelt to Outline Program Today.

Senate silverites said yesterday they expected a message today from President Roosevelt which would recommend the silver program already agreed upon with the Administration, the Associated Press reported.

The principal provision of the proposal, they said, would be a mandatory declaration of policy that silver should be added to the monetary reserves until it reaches a 25-75 ratio with gold.

Permissive nationalization, or the taking over of domestic stocks of the metal, also is to be included in the program.

Once the message is received, the bill to carry out its terms is to be substituted for the pending Dies silver bill, already reported by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Soviet Fire Departments Speed Water for Crops

Rostov, U. S. S. R., May 21 (AP). With a mobilization akin to a military movement, Communists party chiefs today started a far-flung war on drought which menaces the Russian wheat fields.

In the Azov-Black Sea region all city and village fire departments started concentrating all available barrels at strategic points in the fields. All able-bodied men who can be spared from other tasks are ordered to help bring water to the parched crops.

'Monte Carlo Gamble' in Suit On Mississippi Bonds Loses

Baron Tweedmouth and Mary Euphemia Elliot, of London, and Giovanni Del Drago, of New York City, who had inherited them from ancestors. The purpose of the gift was to determine whether Monaco could realize any sum on the bonds.

With nothing to lose, but the costs of bringing the action, the principality of Monaco petitioned the Supreme Court for permission to sue Mississippi for the principal of the bonds and interest from the dates the latter went into default—a total of $574,300. It was a typical Monte Carlo gamble, with the nine blacked-robed justices of the Supreme Court sitting in place of the fates of chance. Monaco lost, thus ending what was perhaps the last fight over the defaulting Mississippi indentures.

One aspect of the case was that it reversed the usual course of trying to collect an international debt. This Government has been making vain efforts through diplomatic channels to get the Allied nations of Europe to pay back the money loaned to them by this Government during the World War. But in this case, an European government was trying to collect from a political division of the United States a defaulting debt.

In his decision for the court, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes went back to the Constitutional convention and cited the words of Marshall and Madison to show that the framers of the Constitution intended States, possessing attributes of sovereignty, to be immune from suits, without their consent.

Barred From Agreement.

Hughes pointed out that American States are barred from entering into agreements with foreign nations without Congressional consent. His opinion suggested that the controversy might be settled through diplomatic negotiations between Monaco and the State Department, acting as Mississippi's agent. But it was regarded as doubtful whether Monaco would take such a step in view of Mississippi's repudiation of the debt.

In another Supreme Court decision it was held that when a State engages in enterprises not primarily governmental functions, such as the liquor business, it is not entitled to immunity from Federal taxes. Ohio, which has established a State-owned liquor dispensary system, brought the suit to prevent collection of Federal liquor taxes on its sales.

The suit was brought under the established principle that the Federal Government can not tax the instrumentalities of a State. Justice George Sutherland, speaking for the court, recognized the validity of the rule, but held that "the immunity of the States from Federal taxation is limited to those agencies which are of a governmental character."

He held that the selling of liquor was essentially a private and non-governmental function, rejecting the Ohio argument that it was exercising its police power as a result of the passage of the twenty-first amendment repealing prohibition.

He said this latter argument was "fanciful" and that the repeal amendment did not convert what had always been a private activity into a governmental functon. Moreover, he held that the polce power remained, as applied to business activities, "the power to regulate those activities, not engaged in carrying them on."

Takes on Trading Power.

"When a State enters the market place seeking customers it divests itself of its quasi-sovereignty pro tanto, and takes on the character of a trader, so far, at least, as the taxing power of the Federal Government is concerned," the opinion asserted.

In a third decision the Supreme Court set aside the findings of the Ohio Supreme Court on the 48-cent gas rate prescribed for Columbus, Ohio. The court here held the rate was not fair because it was not sufficient to provide an allowance to take care of depletion of gas wells.

The State of Arizona was denied permission to take testimony of former President Herbert Hoover and others as to circumstances surrounding the drafting of the Santa Fe compact to develop Boulder Dam. It was another chapter in Arizona's fight against the apportionment of water from the Colorado River.

For the second time the court recognized Lee DeForest, radio pioneer, as the holder of valid patents involving the "feed back" radio circuit and the vacuum tube "oscillator," essential devices in radio transmission. The ruling was made in a case brought by Radio Corporation of America, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the De Forest Radio Co., to restrain patent infringement by the Radio Engineering Laboratories, Inc. The former were upheld.

Lost Propellor Thought Cause of Air Tragedy

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., May 21 (AP). Loss of a propellor while on a flight from Lake Worth, Fla., to Miami was believed tonight to have caused an airplane crash near here which killed David H. Salkind, 30, of Morristown, N. J., and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Walter Drew, 52, of Lake Worth.

Salkind and Mrs. Drew crashed to their deaths today near Port Everglades shortly after leaving Lake Worth.

Ballou Hits At Criticism Of Teaching

Historical Group Survey Vague, Without Any Merit, He Asserts.

Report Is Declared Unjust by District School Chief.

Controversy over methods of teaching history and social science to the youth of America broke out in the Capital yesterday with Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of Washington schools, its focal point.

Ballou struck out at the framers of a report on the teaching of history and social science issued recently after five years' investigation by a commission appointed by the American Historical Association, of which he was a member.

Though officials of the historical association at its headquarters here said they knew nothing of Dr. Ballou's dissent and had not yet received copies of the report, it was known that the commission recommended that children be taught the evils as well as the good about present-day life, institutions and culture, and was highly critical of teaching methods and teacher training institutions.

"Report Not Reasonable."

Ballou, under whose supervision Washington schools long have made active use of intelligence tests, another target of the report, asserted:

"On one hand in my judgment the report is destrictively critical of current educational practices which the commission did not adequately investigate and dispassionately appraise; on the other hand, the report does not present a reasonable definite, constructive program for the improvement on instruction in the social studied, which program, in my judgment, should have been the main feature of the report."

Ballou contended that the report did "serious injustice to the scientific movement of education as described in the chapter on 'Tests and Testing.'"

"This chapter," he declared, "is not based on any thorough-going investigation of testing in general or on any conclusions reached in the discussion of the commission. The vigorous protests made by me and some of my colleagues against the chapter have been to a large extent ignored.

"In my judgment the destructive criticism of the teacher and methods of teaching and teacher training institutions is bound to arouse antagonism rather than to promote unity and improvement in American education."

Ballou said the chapter on "Selection and Organization of Materials on Instruction" should have been the heart of the report. He found it a disappointment.

"The discussion is so general," he said, that frequently one can not determine whether the discussion has to do with elementary schools, the secondary schools, or colleges and universities.

Had Sought Construction.

"As a member of the commission it was my hope that th efinal volume would be the basis on which constructive improvement of teaching the social studies might be based. In my judgment, the report is inadequate in this respect."

Ballou said he had asked George J. Jones, head of the department of history and the social studies in the junoir and senoir high scholos of the District, to read a draft of the report and to make him a memorandum on the "specific recommendations" uncovered. Ballou said the Jones memorandum covered less than two typewritten pages.

Jones described the report as "glittering in generalities," and told the superintendent that he had for two years "withheld the printing of outsocial science courses waiting for the report of the commission. "I expected that there would be definite recommendations. I will not give the manuscript for the courses to you . . . not one change will be made. . . ."

The commission's report is being published in book form and should be availabel at book stores at an early date, it was said.

Scottsville Race Fight Injuring 50 Probed

Scottsville, Va., May 21 (AP). Authorities today investigated a race battle here Saturday night in which 50 persons were injured. They sent two cases to the grand jury and 20 other persons were instructed to appear at the grand jury hearing on June 4 in Charlottesville.

Harold Stephenson, city attorney, said he was advised the fight started when several white persons were forced from the sidewalk by colored persons. In the battle which followed several hundred persons were said to have participated.

Harrisonburg Citizens Hit Pouch Mail Plan

Richmond, May 21 (AP).—E. W. Thompson, representing the Chesapeake & Western Railroad, and citizens of Harrisonburg today discussed with Gov. Peery the proposal of the Postoffice Department to change from an open car service to a closed pouch mail service between Elkton and Bridgewater.

The Governor said definite action in the matter had not been decided. The railroad and citizens are protesting the change.

Boston Woman, 65, Mysteriously Slain

Boston, May 21 (AP).—Miss Delia Kelley, 65, was found dead in bed today in the Charlestown section of the city under conditions which police described as murder.

Bloodstains were on her face and on the bedclothes and the disorder of the room indicated a struggle. lie received a telephone call from an unidntified man who directed them to the woman's address. A boarder in the same house was being sought.

Hens Poisoned, Eggs Sold, She Ends Life

Randolph, Wis., May 21 (AP).—When Mrs. Paul Patrick's chickens fell ill, she fed them a mash treated with acid in hope of curing them. Meanwhile she sold their eggs. Twenty-five chickens subsequently died.

Mrs. Patrick, fearing for the health of her customers, drowned herself in a water trough.

Papers Soaked in Kerosene Are Set Ablaze.

Manassas, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—The home of M. A. Psarakis, proprietor of the Oriental Restaurant of Washington, was partly destroyed by fire here early today.

Mr. and Mrs. Psarakis and children were spending the week-end in Washington. The house was entered, paper soaked with kerosene was placed under chairs and tables, and set afire.

The Manassas Volunteer Fire Department checked the blaze after it had destroyed the kitchen, upstairs bathroom and childrens' playroom.

Young District Democrats in Hot Campaign

Officers Will Be Elected Wednesday After Bitter Fight.

A political fight which has the bitterness of a Kentucky feud will be decided Wednesday night at the Willard Hotel when District division of Young Democratic Clubs of America elects officers.

The rival slates are led by Maj. Raymond J. Walter, who supervises NRA compliance in Washington, and Goodwin Chase, a secretarial employe in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Marvin Cox, secretary to Representative Homer C. Parker, of Georgia, and the incumbent president, did not choose to run.

Maj. Walter, interviewed last night, expressed quiet confidence his "new deal" ticket will be victorious "without slinging any mud." He heads the list of nominees "who will lead our club to great achievements, if you support them in the coming elections."

The opposing slates represent an internal split which originated last year when about 30 insurgents broke away from the Young Democrats Club of Washington and set up their own organization. In a year the membership has increased from 30 to 1,700, according to Maj. Walter.

The new club affiliated itself with the Young Democratic Clubs of America while the older organization, which is now said to have a membership of 200 to 300, went its own way under the same name as a purely local outfit.

Now, said Maj. Walter, the "new deal" faction within the District division which he represents is attempting to crush the "clique" that founded the club and which has been in control ever since. The present officers are not running for reelection but the opposition has their support and thus personifies the "old deal," the major alleged.

Campaign rivalry is so intense that several fist fights have been averted only by narrow margins, according to reports.

So it's 8 p. m. at the Willard Wednesday, folks, and check your shooting irons and fowling pieces at the door.

A cry against "hot oil" by Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes echoed under the dome of the Capitol yesterday.

In a few crisp words he told members of the Senate Mining Committee holding hearings on the Thomas bill that its production in the east Texas and other Southwestern fields must cease.

The man of many jobs in the Roosevelt Cabinet—one of them being oil administrator—urged early passage of the bill vesting in the Government power to establish oil quotas and regulate commerce in petroleum.

"This is a vitally important measure and I think passage is imperative at this session," Secretary Ickes said.

Incidentally, he doubted ability of the States to regulate production of oil in a manner advantageous to both consumers and producers.

Took Stump in Texas.

The administrator has just returned from the east Texas fields, where he explained the measure, saying it would wipe out the so-called bootlegger and the racketeer within the third largest industry in the United States.

In retrospect "hot oil" has burned the Administration's thumb, and the Thomas bill is regarded as having the required healing power. The term "hot oil" applies to production in excess of quotas allocated by the oil administration.

The Cabinet officer claims that the majority of the industry is in favor of the bill.

The obstructionists, he contends, are the runners of "hot oil." In a speech at Tulsa last week, he gave his own version of "what a hot oil gentleman is:"

"He is the man who steals his neighbor's oil, surreptitiously sneaks it into refinery which serves as a fence for such stolen goods, and then bootlegs it into the retail market."

60,000 Barrels Daily Seen.

Before the Senate group yesterday he asserted "hot oil" production is on the increase in East Texas and other fields. He said it was estimated that 60,000 barrels of illegal oil are produced daily in Texas alone, adding:

"At this rate of production, the supply can not be absorbed by consumers. The market is bound to break if this continues.

"Federal regulation of oil production is absolutely necessary to stop flooding the markets with oil.

"Unless these principles contained in this bill are enacted into law at this session of Congress, I predict there will be a breakdown in production control before Congress convenes again that will cause the abandonment of thousands of oil wells, the complete destruction of oil reserves and unemployment with its accompanying sufferings."

Newspaper Publisher Heard.

After Amos L. Beaty, chairman of the planning and coordinating committee, and Col. Harold B. Fell, executive vice president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, had outlined their indorsement of the measure, the Senate Committee heard words of "oil thieves" honecombing the entire East Texas fields "to filch their neighbor's oil in the dead of night."

Such was part of Carl Estes' story. Mr. Estes is a Tyler (Tex.) newspaper publisher. He minced no words in telling the committee he never had favored Government control and "bureaucracy," but, he said, "I am ready for it now to save the birthright of my people."

He declared the issue was "between the forces of decency on one side and the forces of hot oil thievery on the other."

The publisher branded the efforts of the Texas Railroad Commission, State oil regulatory body, as having "failed miserably," because two of its members had been "playing politics."

Gungirl's Sister Tried In Killing of Policeman

Fort Worth, Tex., May 21 (AP).—Billie White, alias Billy Mace, 21-year-old sister of Bonnie Parker, Southwestern gunwoman, and Floyd Hamilton, brother of Raymond Hamilton, Texas outlaw, were charged here today with the murder of Highway Patrolmen E. B. Wheeler, 26, and H. D. Murphy, 24, near Grapevine, Tex., on Easter Sunday.

The patrolmen were shot and killed when they attempted to question a couple seated in a car on a side road.

Elissa Landi Wins Right To Start Divorce Action

Los Angeles, May 21 (AP).—Elissa Landi, movie actress and novelist, was given court permission today to serve divorce papers on John Cecil Lawrence, London barrister, by publication.

She said today he had refused to leave England to make his home here and "refuses to submit to any situation that he says might entail his being called 'Mr. Elissa Landi.'"

Former State Secretary Of Missouri Dies at 65

St. Joseph, Mo., May 21 (AP).—Charles U. Becker, 65, former Missouri secretary of state, died in a hospital here today, after an illness of several weeks.

Becker was thrice elected secretary of state and each time led the entire Republican State ticket. In 1932, however, he lost the Republican nomination for Governor.

Today and Tomorrow

Afternoon and Evening

The entire style show is under the auspices of the Modern American Guild in cooperation with Good Housekeeping Magazine. It is an interpretation of modern American design for homes of today, and offers the newest and latest ideas in color and decoration. Modern interiors ask for furniture designed and created for their wall and floor spaces.

It is natural, then, that you should look to modern furniture—with its simplicity and directness of lines, its gayety and charm of color, its look of unessential detail—to fit the constricted space and limited outlook of modern rooms.

Many are the ways and means to the modern trend, and our experienced interior decorators will help you carry out any idea or plan this style show may inspire.

College Senior Seen Facing Bright Future

U. M. President Says New Fields of Work Open Steadily.

Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, yesterday called on the school's prospective graduates to shake off their pessimism regarding the future of college men in the economic world.

"There have been many discouraging comments about the opportunities open to graduates of our universities," he said. "One thing seems to be overlooked—namely, the passing of every year automatically creates vacancies in every line of work.

"Within the next few years there will be new jobs in the field of applied science which are not ever dreamed of today. Men and women who have the right fundamental training and disposition will be appointed in these positions.

"The need of intelligent guidance and leadership in the social field also is everincreasing. It is easy to belittle this kind of work, but the fact remains that social conditions also become more difficult and complicated, especially in this Nation which is rapidly losing its natural resources and is experiencing great economic and industrial changes."

Dr. Pearson pointed out that destruction of forests, the erosion of soil, the appearance of new and terrible diseases, the human desire to keep up with competitors were factors that had an important bearing upon jobs for university graduates.

The message appeared late yesterday in the weekly issue of the Diamondback, official University of Maryland publication.

Her topic will be "International Relations." Mrs. Mildred Kahler Geare will discuss "Press and Publicity in Relation to Women's Clubs."

Mrs. Sheldon Lord, president of the hostess club, will extend greetings and the response for the federation will be given by Mrs. James B. Noble. Club extension will be urged by Mrs. G. Albert Kuper, vice president of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs.

Sales Tax Exceeds State's Estimates

Charleston, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). Receipts now indicate that the 2 per cent State consumers' sales tax will yield much more than was expected, and State tax officials say fears it would prove inadequate have been dispelled.

With returns received from more than 12,500 business operators, receipts for April, the first month of the new tax, exceeded $470,000, and tax officials say returns which will trickle in later will run the average total to approximately $500,000.

The tax department estimates that on the basis of present receipts the tax will produce around $7,500,000 for the 15 months it is to be effective. Legislative estimates fixed the total yield at $6,500,000. The tax represents emergency revenue to be used chiefly for relief purposes.

Cumberland Veterans March Memorial Day

Cumberland, Md., May 21 (Spl.). Final plans for Memorial Day services have been completed by Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion. The feature will be a parade of the various organizations of former service men and exercises in Rose Hill Cemetery.

Headed by a platoon of police, the formation will be: Eagles Band, members of Tyler Post, Grand Army of the Republic, in automobiles; members of Hartsock Post, Spanish War Veterans; Company G, First Maryland Infantry and Drum Corps; Henry Hart Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and drum corps; members of post and ladies' auxiliary, Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, and drum corps, and members of post and ladies' auxiliary.

Dedication of Lee Statue Is Planned

Marlinton, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). Plans are being made for dedication of a statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee just completed by Mrs. Frank Hunter, of West Marlinton. The statue has been placed at the road junction at West Marlinton, on the Seneca trail, on the site of a toll house where Gen. Lee stayed for a time in the Civil War.

The new statue is a copy of the work of art entitled, "The List," showing Lee scanning a roll of soldiers who fought with him.

Pharmacy Tests Set.

Terra Alta, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). S. M. Scott, jr., of this city, president of the State Board of Pharmacy, has called a meeting of the board for June 26 and 27 at Charleston for the purpose of examining applicants for registration as pharmacists and assistant pharmacists.

Electric Rate Raise Fought

Western Maryland Citizens Say Only Large Users Would Benefit.

Baltimore, May 21 (Spl.).—Leading citizens of the towns of Keedysville, Sharpsburg and Boonsboro in Western Maryland, appeared before the public service commission here today to protest a proposed increase in electric light and power rates by the Potomac-Edison Co.

Potomac-Edison recently purchased the Antietam Light & Power Co., and plans to revise its rates for the three towns and surrounding areas so that the schedules will conform with rates charged in the other sections served by it, the delegation charged.

Frank Warrenfelz, spokesman, declared the proposed change would benefit only a few large users of electric power. The vast majority, he said, whose consumption is only average, would have to pay more.

Minimum rates in the towns would be increased from $1 to $1.50 per month, he said, and in the rural areas surrounding the towns the increase would be from $1 to $2. Elimination of the two-meter system for domestic power-users also was assailed.

The public service commission replied that although it understood a change in the rate schedule was to be asked, it had not yet been applied for. Until the application is made, the P. S. C. said, nothing can be done, but the delegation received a promise that when the application is made they will be notified so a formal protest may be lodged.

Guns Pop on River Banks as Anglers Seek 'Red Horses'

Richmond, May 21 (AP).—Washington and Russell County fishermen are becoming expert rifle shots these days and the reason is a plentiful supply of "red horses" some times called "Ohio Salmon" in the South and Middle Forks of the Holston River in Washington County and the Clinch River in Russell County.

Red horses won't bite at a hook, except in rare cases, but anglers have discovered that they can be secured by shooting with a rifle. Special county regulations limit the season and allow the shooting of the fish from May 1 to May 31 in Washington County and from May 1 to May 30 in Russell.

Expert marksmanship is required to hit the flitting gray-backed, sucker-like fish as they swarm into the shallow waters to spawn.

Warships Prepare For Middy Cruise

Wyoming to Annapolis; Trip Starts June 3.

Norfolk, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—The battleship Wyoming steamed out of Hampton Roads today for Annapolis.

The battleship Arkansas arrived in the Roadsted this afternoon and is loading supplies preparatory to joining the Wyoming the latter part of the week to begin the midshipmen's practice cruise. The future admirals will be taken on a cruise to European ports, returning home in September.

The middies are to board the ships June 3 and will be subjected to all Navy regulations while on the cruise.

Berryville Asks For Liquor Store

Berryville, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—A petition requesting that the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board establish a liquor dispensary in Berryville has been passed by the local town council.

The action requesting the dispensary here marks an initial step by town councils in this section of Virginia. In Winchester, 9 miles west, no official request for a dispensary has been made, while in Shenandoah County it appears that the voters will request a referendum on the matter with the idea expressed in some quarters that the county will go dry.

In Berryville, the council has also instructed Edward McC. Williams, town attorney, to prepare a special ordinance in regard to public drunkenness. The nature of the ordinance has not been made public.

Dental Examiner Named.

Charleston, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). Dr. Dwight L. Grimm, of Parkersburg, has been appointed a member of the State Board of Dental Examiners by Gov. H. G. Kump.

Culpeper High To Graduate 49

Commencement to Open With Senior Play, "Agatha's Aunt."

Culpeper, Va., May 21 (Spl.). Commencement week of the Culpeper High School will have as its opening event on June 1, the senior class play, "Agatha's Aunt," with Miss Mildred Davies and Horace Taylor, playing the leads in the comedy production.

The cast includes 14 seniors, all members of the Dramatic Club, directed by Miss Mary McNeil and Miss Eliza G. Miller, of the faculty.

The Rev. R. W. Vanderberry, executive secretary of the Christian Board of Education, of Richmond, will preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday evening.

Forty-nine students, the largest class in the history of the school, will graduate. Class night, with presentation of diplomas, will be Monday evening. Names of honor students are being withheld until the final examinations.

Special graduating exercises for the seventh grade, promoting successful pupils to the high school, will be held Tuesday morning. All services will take place in the High School auditorium, with music in charge of the school glee club.

Address to the graduates will be delivered by Dr. J. L. Manahan, dean of education at the University of Virginia.

Tipplers Sentenced To Sweep Streets

Hagerstown Judge Fulfills His Threat.

Hagerstown, Md., May 21 (Spl.). When police court was swamped today with week-end intoxicated persons, Magistrate Richard Duffey made good the warning served a week ago, only he imposed even more severe penalties than he had promised.

Three who have been coming before him with regularity will spend the next three days working on city streets.

Tomorrow morning they will be placed in charge of a guard and supplied brooms and sickles and required to sweep streets and cut weeds.

Descendant of Key Dies in Baltimore

Granddaughter of National Anthem Author.

Baltimore, May 21 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Boyland, granddaughter of Francis Scott Key, who wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner," died yesterday at her home here. She had been an invalid for five years.

She also was a descendant of Gov. Edward Lloyd and a great niece of the late Chief Justice Roger Brooke Taney of the United States Supreme Court.

She was married twice. Surviving are two sons by her first marriage.

New School Group To Meet in October

Parkersburg, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.).—The executive committee announces that the annual convention of a new State educational body, the West Virginia Association of County Boards of Education, will be held October 26 in Parkersburg in connection with the annual convention of the West Virginia State Education Association, which will be held here October 25-27.

The new body has been formed to bring members of the new county unit education boards and the State education association closer together.

Grafton Girl's Vanishing Stirs Kidnaping Fears

Grafton, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). With relatives and friends fearing she has been kidnaped, a wide search was started today for Sarah Ann Mason, 15, high school student, member of a wealthy Grafton family and daughter of Mrs. Cecile Mason.

It became known today when search was widened by local and State police that the girl mysteriously disappeared last Wednesday while on her way to school. Wallace N. Henderson, police chief, said there are no clues but discredits the theory of kidnaping.

100 FERA Workers Strike at Grafton

Grafton, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). Declaring they were underpaid, 100 FERA workers employed on the PWA high school field house here went on a strike today, the result of a mass meeting held yesterday at the old Fair Grounds.

The strikers said they were entitled to 45 cents an hour, the rate paid under the CWA as set by National headquarters. Present wages are set by local boards. FERA officials are undecided as to what action to take.

Three Taylor County Projects Are Approved

Grafton, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Simon Friedman, Taylor County relief administrator, has received word from Charleston that three projects had been approved.

They include the Grafton High School field house, the high school athletic field and a city project on Ross street. It is expected that nearly 100 men will receive jobs and be at work by the first of the week.

Mrs. G. H. Harsha Buried.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Mrs. G. K. Harsha, 62, who died of a paralytic stroke while visiting here with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry A. White, was buried in Weston, W. Va., today.

Finger-Print System Solves Series of Winchester Thefts

Winchester, Va., May 21 (Spl.). Winchester police today announced the solution of their twenty-fifth robbery, 12 of which have occurred during the past month, as a result of the fingerprint system installed here six months ago. Sergt. Francis M. Funk is in charge of the fingerprint work.

With the confession of Joe Smith, 20, of this city, yesterday that he was responsible for a dozen robberies here during the past month, the officers brought to a solution a "crime wave" in Winchester which resulted in the majority of the policemen working 18 hours per day.

Smith, who deftly covered up his fingerprints in the majority of his robberies, left a clew Friday night when he broke into the service station of the Twin City Oil & Gas Co. He removed a part of the window and carried it a short distance from the place, believing that he had hid it. The officers found the glass and Sergt. Funk discovered fingerprints. Study of the fingerprints disclosed that they were not those of persons being watched. Smith was taken up for investigation and his fingerprints taken. These were shown to tally with those found on the glass.

Police said that Smith was arrested several years ago in connection with a robbery here but was not convicted.

Delegate Appointed.

Culpeper, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—D. James Coleman, well-known citizen and member of the Town Council of Culpeper, has been appointed by Gov. Peery to be a delegate to represent the Commonwealth of Virginia at the eighth session of the Institute of Public Affairs, to be held at University of Virginia, July 1-14. Mr. Coleman is relief director for Culpeper County.

Bausells Will Go To Jail at Bristol

Father Will Stay With Son Despite Bond.

Wytheville, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Henry F. Bausell, 57, and his son, Bernace, 28, charged jointly with slaying T. Eugene Cornett in a gun battle at Rural Retreat, Va., on January 13, will be moved from Wytheville Jail to the Bristol Jail this week, it was announced yesterday by attorneys defending the two men.

Bond for the elder Bausell was fixed by Judge Horace Southerland at $25,000, but Bausell decided yesterday he would remain in jail with his son, who has been convicted and sentenced to 32 years in prison.

Defense attorneys then successfully proposed to Judge Sutherland that the two men be removed to Bristol Jail, where young Bausell will be able to secure necessary medical attention.

The two men have been in confinement since Cornett and his daughter, who was the wife of Bernace Bausell, were slain four months ago. They were acquitted of the charge that they slew Mrs. Bernace Bausell. Henry Bausell will be tried in July on the charge he slew Cornett.

Ickes Will Visit Indian Delegation

700 Plan Encampment at Salem.

Salem, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, and L. D. Chamberlain, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., commissioner of Indian affairs for the Southern District, will come to Salem Friday to visit an expedition of Indians now on the way to Washington.

Chief White Elk Dillon, National secretary of the Indian Federation of America, stated on a visit just made here for making preliminary arrangements for a camp of the delegation that both officials had so informed him.

The Indian delegation, comprising about 700, is on its way to Washington to lobby for several rights, including the right to vote and to handle money. It will remain in camp on a tract just outside of Salem Friday, through Sunday. There, as at other stops on the way, programs will be given to encourage support of the legislation desired.

White Elk Dillon is a chief of the Hopi Tribe of Arizona.

Fireman Scalded When Engine Overturns.

Roanoke, Va., May 21 (AP).—Fred E. Talbert, 52, an engineer, was killed and Perry E. Alley, 56, fireman, was seriously scalded when the locomotive of an extra Norfolk & Western freight southbound was derailed and overturned in a cut on the south side of Nace, on the Shenandoah Valley Division, yesterday.

Alley, drenched by escaping steam, was found under the cab of the locomotive while Talbert's body was found near the tank, rescuers said. Roscoe Cromer, 44, head brakeman, who was said to have been riding in the pit of the locomotive, jumped and suffered only a minor cut on the right temple and an injury to his left shoulder.

Twelve freight cars were derailed by the wreck, which blocked the cut and tore up track for a considerable distance. The freight, Cromer said, was moving at a speed of 30 or 35 miles an hour when the accident occurred.

Daughters of King Will Meet Friday

Roanoke, Va., May 21 (Spl.). Daughters of the King in the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia will hold their twelfth annual meeting at Christ Church here Friday.

Communion will be celebrated by the Right Rev. Robert C. Jett, D. D., Episcopal bishop of the diocese, assisted by the Rev. J. F. W. Field, rector of Christ Church. A business session featuring a roundtable discussion, led by Miss Rives, of Baltimore, is scheduled in the afternoon.

Officers of the diocese are Mrs. M. A. Carpenter, of Roanoke, president; Mrs. James Foster, of Staunton, vice president; Mrs. Harry I. Johnson, of Salem, secretary; Mrs. Gilpin Wilson, jr., of Staunton, treasurer, and Mrs. K. A. Grandstaff, of Bristol, president of bishop's chapter.

Measles Epidemic Hits Forest Camp

Edinburg, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—An epidemic of measles has broken out at Camp Roosevelt, of the Civilian Conservation Corps. All cases are being sent to Walter Reed Hospital, Washington.

Lieut. Cordona, camp surgeon, stated that the cases were mild.

Daily inspection is being made and strict sanitary precautions are being observed. There are 194 men at the camp. No figures were given as to the number suffering with measles.

Beauty Title Won By Miss Turnbull

Montross, Va., May 21 (Spl.). Miss Marie Turnbull, of Hague, was judged "Miss Westmoreland, 1934," at the beauty pageant sponsored in the Montross High School auditorium by the Westmoreland County American Legion post. Miss Garnett Taylor, of Colonial Beach, was second in the contest.

Miss Turnbull, a student of Cople High School, will represent Westmoreland at the State beauty contest in Lynchburg in September.

Madeira Institution's Bid of $500 Takes Last Such Highway Near Here.

The last toll road in northern Virginia, the Washington, Great Falls and Dranesville highway, has been purchased by the Madeira School and will be offered to the State of Virginia, it was learned yesterday.

The road was sold at auction Saturday to J. Edward Burroughs, Washington attorney, who did not reveal whom he represented. When the purchase was confirmed yesterday in Fairfax County Circuit Court it was shown that Burroughs had acted for the school, which is located on the road.

One of the oldest roads in this section of nearby Virginia, the highway has been operated as a toll road since 1921, when a corporation was formed to take it over.

During the past several years, the highway has been reported as losing money and has paid no interest on its bonded indebtedness. A group of stockholders, headed by Herman Gasch, asked for appointment of a receiver. The Fairfax Court ordered its sale and it was knocked down to Mr. Burroughs, whose bid of $500 was highest.

The Madeira School will turn the highway over to the State, which, if it accepts, is expected to improve the road, which is narrow and in need of repair because of the damage by the severe winter.

Under terms of the sale, the new purchaser is permitted to operate the highway as a toll road with the provision that if not kept in a suitable condition it will revert to the State.

Men And Events.

Men and events make adult education.

With those words, Morse A. Cartwright begins the annual report of the director of the American Association for Adult Education, which opened its ninth annual convention here yesterday. Throughout all the major periods of history, he says, men have discussed those matters about which they cared the most. And what they cared the most about were things "in the air." From Abelard and Spinoza to Darwin and Huxley, and he might well have added to John Dewey, "all the saints in the calendar of adult education" have been canonized solely because they taught men and women those matters in which they were the most interested.

Because they taught timely things they became great teachers. It was less that they were born leaders than that they were thrown into leadership by the eager minds of their followers. And all—leader and led alike—were "impelled by the strange urge of their times."

The strange urge of today is manifold. It expresses itself in a universal curiosity about the inner meanings of economics, sociology, government. Adults, much more than children, cry for knowledge. They are everywhere seeking an explanation of what we call the social order. "We crave to take it apart," this new intellectual plaything, "to analyze it, to put it together again in what we conceive to be a better arrangement."

The central theme of adult education is this strange, compelling urge. Its importance is tremendous; its possibilities many. But those charged with the task of education need be awake at all times, lest they be lured down uncleared paths of radicalism, lest they be blocked by blind conservatives.

With admirable and compelling calm, Mr. Cartwright pleads for a return to the true liberalism, golden mean between radicalism and reaction. The task of the educator is to restore faith in a sane and orderly progress, but, let it not be forgotten, orderliness and sanity that are not so "deliberate as to impede progress."

Spain And The Philippines.

Nearly four centuries before the American occupation of the Philippine Islands, Spanish civilization planted its roots in the archipelago. Outside of Manila a generation of Americanization has done little more than scratch the surface of the deep layers of Spanish customs and culture that still cover the islands. There are 4,000 Spaniards still living there, almost as many as the American colony. The predominant architecture is Spanish. The religion of the islands came from Spain, and the Spanish language shows no signs of dying out. The contribution of the United States in education, public health, communications and other material improvements has been enormous. But it has not displaced the Spanish basis of Philippine civilization.

It is, therefore, natural that steps toward Philippine independence should be followed by Spanish efforts to strengthen a close cultural and commercial relationship between Spain and the islands. A Hispano-Filipino society has been formed in Madrid and is drawing up an extensive program of activities toward this end. It expects soon to establish a branch at Manila. As a result of this avowedly non-political organization Spain looks forward to a re-formation of relations with its former colonies and would undoubtedly be the first nation to recognize the Philippines, if ultimately freed.

Enrique Carrion, wealthy organizer of this society, calls the islands the "only outpost of the Spanish language in the Orient," and the chief center of Spanish influence in the Far East. But the expression is used in no imperialist sense. In no part of her vanished empire is Madrid planning to reestablish her lost political supremacy. It is in cultural lines, with adequate attention to the commercial benefits of cultural relationships, that modern Spain seeks to retain leadership throughout the vast areas which she once ruled as a dictator.

Delightful Tribute.

The tribute which President Roosevelt paid to the memory of Lafayette on the one hundredth anniversary of his death was in a most felicitous vein. There was a subtle touch in the description of Gen. Lafayette revisiting this country, as an old man, and meeting Andrew Jackson in a manner "as simple and genuine as their natures." By linking the distinguished hero of the Revolutionary War to the democratic America of a much later day, the President succeeded in dispelling the atmosphere of remoteness which surrounds the great men of that earlier period. As a result, Lafayette emerges as a real and delightful personality.

This emphasis upon the man himself, instead of upon his heroic achievements, served to introduce an intimate note into the anniversary address and to arouse a much warmer feeling than a more conventional kind of eulogy. The address should help to strengthen ties of friendship between France and the United States at a time when they are being subjected to a heavy political strain, the heritage of a war in which Americans fought by the side of Frenchmen for the second time in the history of the two nations.

The Case Of Judge Cobb.

The case of James A. Cobb assumes an additional significance because it is coming to a crisis so closely on the heels of that of Willard Thorp, recently forced by Democratic politicians to resign from his able directorship of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Of the two examples of cheap political maneuvering that affecting Judge Cobb is the more disgusting. Patronage in command in the heart of the "planned economy" is a devastating absurdity. But patronage in bare-faced control of appointments to the judiciary, right in the National Capital, is intolerable.

For eight years Mr. Cobb served with high credit as a special assistant to the Attorney General. He then retired temporarily to private practice, to be appointed by President Coolidge in 1926 to his present post as a judge in the District Municipal Court. It is worth remembering that at that time stiff opposition to his appointment was made by the District Republican organization on the grounds that he was not a good party man. For just that reason, coupled with his high legal qualifications, President Coolidge appointed him to the post now at issue. For his same indifference and superiority to partisan politics Judge Cobb was selected, as President Hoover noted, as a member of the commission which investigated Southern labor conditions in 1932.

For his work on the District Bench, Judge Cobb has won unstinted praise. His character, his ability, his knowledge, his tact, his discretion—are none of them in question. He has been indorsed for reappointment by the bar associations and by numerous civic leaders and organizations. It has been freely admitted that another colored jurist measuring up to Judge Cobb's standards can not be found in Washington. But the search for another Negro judge, with the Democratic label, goes on, so that a new appointment may be used for political capital in parts of the country which know nothing of the actual local situation.

Disfranchised Washington is a unit in bitterly resenting this intrusion of the cheapest form of politics into the District Municipal Court. It is well known that President Roosevelt has been apprised, from many quarters, of the actual situation as here summarized. It is equally well known that a word from the President will continue Judge Cobb in the office which he has so competently filled. Many fine phrases denouncing the growing orgy of patronage have come from high Democratic circles recently. The case of Judge Cobb may well be regarded as an acid test of their sincerity.

Another Fascist State.

The spread of Fascism is not the result of any profound political philosophy, leading men to prefer a centralized nonrepresentative form of government to liberal institutions. The new Bulgarian premier, for instance, explains the establishment of a dictatorship in Sofia by saying: "The cause of our action was that the political and moral decomposition of the country had reached alarming proportions. The country was in danger of reaching an impossible situation."

The same evidences of disintegration that produced the Bulgarian coup d'etat have accounted for the overthrow of government after government by dictators prepared to substitute decrees for laws. The best that can be said for the phenomenon is that it seems an unavoidable evil which has enabled countries without traditions of self-government to combat the progress of that strange social malady to which the Bulgarian premier refers.

The origins of Fascism must be sought in the causes that give rise to political impotence and social demoralization, obvious even among politically emancipated peoples. The tremendous upheaval wrought by the war, and the equally ruinous mistakes of the postwar eras, have created discords and given rise to conflicts of interest difficult of solution by methods of deliberation and compromise. Fascism provides only a provisional means of escape from that "impossible situation" to which Bulgaria like so many other countries has been brought in recent years. It is an admission of political failure, an acceptance of the inability of a people to govern themselves.

Embarrassing Situation.

The Treasury is said to be worrying about the rise in prices of office equipment. Letter files on which bids have been asked are quoted at $30.62 as compared with $10.73 last year. Flat-top desks that could have been bought in 1933 for $19.70 are selling for $50.00. Unfortunately for the spending branches of Government, budgetary appropriations have not been allocated with due consideration of the price-raising objectives of the recovery program. Perhaps it was taken for granted that a beneficent Providence would so arrange the order of increases that the Government would be able to cut running expenses, while the costs and outlays of private industries were mounting.

Sudden price advances necessarily play havoc with budgetary plans. If the rise in prices is violent, as in periods of uncontrollable inflation, the growing cost of running a government invariably outstrips the increases in current revenues. The result is a losing struggle to maintain a balanced budget. In any case, the fact that competitive bidding on contracts is hampered by the uniformity, or near uniformity, of prices established under codes is an additional aggravating factor.

Such obvious dislocations as those now occurring were predicted when the price-raising program was launched, but the prophets were not heeded. The Administration apparently saw no inconsistency between its own economy program (limited, of course, to the ordinary services) and its endeavors to increase the costs and raise the prices of goods sold to private buyers. The situation is, indeed, embarrassing for harassed Government departments. They are even denied the privilege of complaining vigorously about increases that testify to the vigor with which the price-raising program has been followed by the supply companies.

The Doctors Disagree.

By relying upon the facts and findings of the Federal Trade Commission in its recent investigation of the steel code, the Darrow Board gave the chief counsel for the NRA, Donald R. Richberg, an excellent opportunity to assail the practices and opinions of the older regulatory agency. Mr. Richberg took advantage, to the full.

The NRA official accuses the Commission of judging the steel code after reviewing "a fraction" of the available evidence. He asserts that the NRA was asked to furnish only evidence designed to support the "legal and economic preconceptions" of the Commission. He also believes that an attempt was made to discredit the NRA by emphasizing the alleged demerits of the steel code and omitting all reference to resultant benefits. "Apparently the Commission feared that it would lose its 'independent judgment,'" says Mr. Richberg, "if it gave NRA an opportunity to point out the many and sometimes ludicrous errors of fact in the Commission report or to expose the unsoundness and inconsistency in some of the conjectural conclusions."

Such an open declaration of war between these two important regulatory agencies is fundamentally of more significance than the violent interchanges between the NRA and the Darrow Board. The Review Board will probably vanish, but the Federal Trade Commission is a permanent and powerful control body with which the NRA will have to reckon at all times. Undoubtedly, the Richberg rejoinder will furnish the foes of the Federal Trade Commission with a devastating battery of arguments against an extension of its regulatory powers. If the Commission is as black as painted why does the President insist on making it the agency of stock exchange regulation?

There can never be effective application of regulatory industrial laws if Government officials spend their time trying to checkmate one another. The cooperation that the Administration so eloquently recommends to private industry ought to begin at home. Otherwise, industries will be increasingly hampered by a lack of consistency in the policies followed, and subjected to costly and annoying restrictions resulting from a division of jurisdictional authority.

For years the Federal Trade Commission has exasperated business by alternately encouraging its leaders to cooperate with a view to curbing competition and then threatening them with prosecution for alleged violation of the antitrust laws. This past record explains Mr. Richberg's parting thrust. He points out that the country may either attempt to improve business policies by encouraging cooperation and using persuasion, or it may revert to the "older policy of limiting Governmental influence upon trade and industry to alternating sunshiny days of grants of special privilege and rainy days of prosecution."

Mr. Richberg's scathing attack throws much-needed light upon the fundamental causes of the confusion of plans and purposes within the Administration. The Federal Trade Commission is naturally disposed to cling to the powers which it formerly exercised, and the NRA is compelled by the nature of its task to insist upon an ultra-liberal interpretation of the antitrust laws. Meantime business remains exposed to the buffetings of regulatory agencies which are at obvious cross-purposes. It is a muddle of policy in which the National response may easily become "a plague on both your houses."

In Calore Veritas.

There is a tradition that, with the first days of hot weather, every newspaper should publish a "light" editorial on the heat. The tradition is absurd.

Perhaps "in wine there is truth." But there certainly is truth in heat. Suave lying requires a cool head and cool weather; Washington-warm weather is hot to the point where you must admit its seriousness.

On Friday, the first straw hats appeared along the Avenue. On Saturday, hats disappeared. On Sunday, vests—waistcoats, if you insist—followed into the Ewigkeit. Coats were noticeably weakening yesterday. This morning, they will conceivably be in full flight. And tomorrow is another day!

Why should any editor treat such weather lightly? Professional writers of light editorials are nearly always heavy men. It is no light matter for a heavy man to be bright in a temperature of such height that he is losing weight every minute. He becomes light-headed rather than light-hearted. The proof is herewith presented.

Pearls From a Pop-Gun.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Such editorials as that appearing in The Post of May 18 entitled "The Silver Compromise" are so utterly moronic that they can only do infinite harm to your Republican masters.

Is it possible that so-called editors can be innocent of modern monetary science and ethics? Do you know nothing of men like Soddy, Holden and myself? If you have read my up-to-date monetary works, what do you use for brains?

Rejection slips from monetary critics of your caliber mean nothing in my young life. I cast my pearls before swine so that I can identify the swine and for no other reason.

Pennsylvania Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am somewhat astonished by the failure of political writers to see at once the significance of the Pennsylvania Republican primary result. A number of Democratic papers are even proceeding to "explain" what they apparently accept as a Roosevelt New Deal defeat.

The Pennsylvania Republican primary result is really the most remarkable Democratic victory within 50 years past, and an overwhelming Roosevelt and New Deal vindication.

Think of this—Pinchot, running as an advocate of a Democratic President's policies, carried 40 per cent of the vote in the Pennsylvania Republican primary! Is not that enough? Was it expected that a Democratic President would get all the Republican votes?

Let Democratic leaders and newspapers cease "explaining" why a Democratic President did not carry the Republican primary. Of all the great Franklin Roosevelt victories, the Pinchot vote in Pennsylvania is undoubtedly the greatest. If the Keystone State result means anything, it means that Franklin Roosevelt could today carry Pennsylvania, something that no Democratic candidate for President has done since the Civil War.

FRANK A. HAMPTON.

Washington, May 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is evident the 500,000 or more voters of Pennsylvania who cast their ballots for Senator Reed in the recent primary held in that State represents the voters opposed to the President's "new deal" and favor the continuance of the old line methods employed by the Republicans of Pennsylvania in the past as typified and vitalized by Senator Reed.

The 800,000 or more voters who cast their ballots for Gov. Pinchot and Joe Guffy represent the majority, favoring the "new deal" and the policies inaugurated by the President.

If Mr. Reed or his stand-pat Republican colleagues can get any comfort out of the result of the election, they are entitled to it for the mountain has certainly labored.

"Finished Art."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I recently found in The Post one of the quaintest, oddest, most restful stories I have read in many years: "When I Was a Boy," by the Old Timer.

Here certainly is something different, and by the by, the writer must be truly an old timer. So thrilling is this most interesting "bit" that I read it through without raising my eyes from the paper, and for an old reporter like myself to find such interest in anything, it must be finished art.

Permit me to add that The Post has improved under its new management 500 per cent and I compliment you.

Federal Leaves.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was interested in reading in The Post a letter signed "An Old Employe," regarding the cut in annual leave of Government employes. Thank you for publishing the letter, for it shows that you are interested in the welfare of the employes. The cut in leave was really a greater blow than the cut in salaries, and just as unnecessary.

We have been told that the leave had to be cut because "big business objected to the Government employes' 30 days as against the two weeks given the average employe in private business. They overlooked the fact that Government employes never received 30 days' vacation, whereas the private employes receive the full time allotted them. Most people outside the Government do not know that the Government employe is charged for every minute he spends away from his office. A minute's tardiness (and this is often forced upon him because of bad transportation in Washington) means a charge of from 15 to 30 minutes against his vacation. Every visit to the dentist and every necessary errand is charged against his vacation. His 30-minute lunch period, as against an hour lunch period in private business, is too short to permit even the simplest errand. When all the small charges for a year are deducted from the present 15 days' leave allowance there is little time left for the much-needed vacation. That condition encourages the use of sick leave for rest and recreation which employes must have if they are to stand up against the constant grind.

The cut in leave was a short-sighted move, for it has been proved that the efficiency of employes is lessened when they have no vacations. As the matter stands only the heads, who are not subject to leave restrictions, and employes who have no scruples against sick leave for annual leave purposes, can have a 15-day vacation. With sick leave set at 12 days per year, extended to 30 days in emergencies, and 30 days of annual leave, the service could be maintained at a more efficient standard.

Only a Rose.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mother's Day has again given varied opportunity to the sons of women to pay homage to the mothers who bore them. From a sense of duty or with deep gratitude they have sent letters, telegrams, gifts or flowers. The pulpit, the press and the radio have expresed beautiful sentiments. After this commendable outpouring of filial devotion men will settle down again with a complacent feeling of noblesse oblige. They have done the chivalrous thing.

I wonder how many men realize what an anomaly this suggests to a woman aware of the status of her sex in all parts of the world. Let me illustrate: Men, if you saw your mother lying prostrate, with a powerful masculine foot on her neck, squirming in discomfort, struggling to rise to free herself, would you stand idly by? No; there isn't a mother's son of you who wouldn't rush to her rescue. Yet everywhere, in greater or less degree, mothers—all women—are in subjection, held down by discriminations which men do not suffer and which men will not remove. You see all this, and you hand mothers a rose. If you will come to the rescue and help to lift your wives, mothers and daughters to a level of equality with men, a right which the Constitution grants to all "citizens," Mother's Day will mean more than mere chivalry.

Neglected Books.

In an article titled "Good Books That Almost Nobody Has Read," the New Republic leads its readers along little-trodden paths of contemporary fiction with Sinclair Lewis, John Dos Passos, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Horace Gregory, Conrad Aiken, T. S. Matthews and other articulate persons as guides. The author of the piece got his material, he states, by the simple device of querying these authors as to what good books of the past few years they considered had not been adequately received or purchased by the press and public, and printed their replies, which, taken in part or as a whole, will doubtless stimulate in many a beholder the resolve to lead a better literary life along lines laid down by such eminent advisers.

Dos Passos, we find, opens his list with "Laugh and Lie Down," a first novel by Robert Cantwell, and closes it with Jack Conroy's "The Disinherited." He and Sinclair Lewis offer one novel in common, "Nobody Starves," by Catherine Brody. Lewis continues his suggestions with "The Glastonbury Romance," by John Cowper Powys, the author of "Wolf Solent," and drives it all home with "Night Over Fitch's Pond," a psychological detective novel by Cora Jarrett. Along comes Horace Gregory with "Saturday Night at the Greyhound," by John Hampson, and Evelyn Scott's "Ideals." T. S. Matthews mentions Alfred Neumann's "The Devil," and adds "War," by Ludwig Renn, which, he indicates, is of the same type as "All Quiet on the Western Front," but a better book. Conrad Aiken mentions his own "Great Circle" and "Preludes for Memnon," which he claims were ill-advisedly neglected in favor of his Pulitzer Prize-winning "Selected Poems," and concludes his contribution on a bitter note—"Where the hell is American criticism?"

If, as Mr. Aiken more than intimates, our professional critics have given all these meritorious works the go-by, there is no really good reason, it seems to us, for mere amateurs of literature to get red in the face. With good fiction, these highly productive times, it is almost the same as with good shirts—there are so many different kinds, all well cut and tailored and all made with Sanfordized non-shrinkable neckbands, and yet even the most active and affluent among us can wear only a limited number of them. It takes several evenings of close application to read a novel of 500 pages. When one divides the reading person's free evenings into several hundred first-rate works of fiction produced each year, it becomes apparent that a certain number of them are mathematically doomed to neglect—not for lack of merit but because of sheer time pressure.

But this is no new discovery that the contributors to the New Republic's symposium have made. Every literary decade has its quota of neglected Cinderellas. But time has a way of furnishing the best of them with the glass slipper and redeeming them from obscurity—if they really have the goods. We have an idea that a few of the books just nominated for a larger audience will eventually attain it, and that the remainder will never be awakened from their present sleep—perhaps because they are really better off dead.

On Time For Lunch.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

THE luncheon-invitation read: "1:30." That was helpful. When invitations are verbal, we become vague about their time-fractions, and so, to be on the safe side, we arrive embarrassingly early.

But what didn't help us much was our watch. Five minutes must have elapsed since we last consulted it, yet its hands had not moved. The watch had stopped.

As we gave our hostess' address to a taxi-driver at Eighteenth Street and the Avenue, we explained our plight. "What time is it now?" we inquired.

He scrutinized the bric-a-brac below the wind-shield. "It's somewhere's out, that house is," he cheerfully countered. "What time d'you say you wanted to get there?"

We had not said it. But we said it on request.

And then he chuckled heartily. "Oh, if that's it, why, we'll be there away ahead of time!"

"Anyways," he continued, as we swept leisurely northward, "I never get 'em to their dates late, hardly. Keepin' passengers' social dates prompt is half a chauffeur's business in Wash'ton. Wash'ton's one of these towns where everybody's going somewheres to eat or receptions every minute, between noon and 2 a. m. So I always ask a fare what time it's for, and if it's soon, I step on it; and if it ain't, I don't.

"My daddy used to say somepo'try to me. 'Be always first man at a feast,' he said, 'and last man at a fray.' He meant a fight, you know. So generally I get 'em there ahead of time, and they take a walk around the block.

"Which is O. K., if the weather's good.

"Of course, sometimes," mused the driver, "I've made my errors, like everybody. Week ago, some foreign fellow and his lady, French mebbie, told me to drive 'em to a lunch-date at the Chevy Chase Club, and I'd just time to make it. Well, mebbie you know, there's a girls' school out near there looks a lot like the Country Club. Wasn't till they'd paid me off and I'd gone a mile I realized I'd left them at the school. But I'd done it on time, anyway."

We asked: "How's our own time now?"

He chuckled. "We got too much!"

He settled himself more restfully behind the wheel. He soliloquized:

"The higher-up places they're goin', the nervouser they are. You can always tell if they're used to it. If they're used to it, they take it easy."

We relaxed.

"Now, the White House," said our driver: "People who take taxis to the White House, why, if you strike a traffic-jam, they 'most get out and walk. You lose more fares takin' people to the White House than a holdup. They don't mean it, but unless you catch 'em and hold on when they get out, they're that nervous' they run in without rememberin' about their fare."

* * *

We were going miles away from the Executive Mansion, but we suggested that he could have his fare now, if he wanted it. He did.

"It'll ease your mind like," said he.

"How's the time?" we asked.

"Mister," said he, "if time was money like the sayin' says, I and you'd be millionaires today.

"What I said about the White House," he meditated, "was specials dates. It's just as bad when there's a big reception, though, only then it's the admiral's fault.

"We call 'em 'admirals' those fellows who 'tend door at the White House. Theres always a bunch, and you ought to see 'em hustle the guests in. I took three parties to that garden-party other day; the admirals reminded me of special policemen at a Coney Island shoot-the-chutes on a Saturday in the old days. They won't take any back-talk off anybody, the admirals won't. Only it's kind of upsetting if you aren't used to it—or Coney."

"Time all right?" We tried to put the question carelessly.

That chauffeur's chuckle ought to have been as reassuring as when he first assured us. "The time's that healthy it could turn around and walk backwards.

"This isn't like a Senator I took to the White House other night. He had a dinner-date there. But he'd been kep' at his office, I guess. Anyway, he said to me, 'Tread on it'. So I tread. Well, you know, when we got there, there the door was wide open and four admirals at it—four admirals doin' nothing except look for this Senator of mine. He did remember to chuck me a bill and tell me 'Keep the change' before they collared him. I'll say that for him. But when he looked up at those admirals and tried to kind of sickly smile everything off by sayin' 'I'm afraid I'm a little late,' you ought to've heard 'em. Two of em said, 'You're more'n twenty minutes late!' And the other two said, 'And everybody's waitin'!'"

We couldn't stand it any longer: "What time is it now?"

At that, however, his chuckle became the laughter of one who knows he has done a good job well. "Now?" he echoed. "Why, now we're there!" . . .

We thought our hostess' doorman regarded us rather oddly. So we looked at our stopped watch. "Just on the dot, eh?" said we.

"Well, no, sir," said the doorman; "not quite, sir."

"What?" we demanded. "Why, what time is it, anyhow?"

"It's 1:50, sir," said the doorman.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

WE are sorry that we are unable to announce this morning the winners of the great invective contest between Mr. Clarence Darrow and the NRA. We had hoped to be able to grade the papers without difficulty and make known the successful contestants without further ado, but for one thing the NRA entered more candidates than we had expected.

We can say, however, that Crack-Down Johnson himself is completely out and that Darrow will not come even one-two in the result. Crack-Down was a flop, disappointing his followers who had built high hopes upon his previous record in invective. Whether it was the enormity of the contest or whether he has simply spent himself is not known. He seems, though, to have been beaten before he started and as a result his product was a most half-hearted piece of work. His strongest term was "shadowy verbiage." It is in most sympathetic vein that we give him a C plus which as the youngsters know is a grade barely possible.

BARGERON.

* * * *

For downright deviltry Darrow would have won in a walk, but the contest was in invective not in deviltry. He would not have made a passable grade at all except that we are inclined to give him something for the confusion of his thought. This has the same purpose as invective. In this particular contest, in fact, we are inclined to take the two as synonomous and, therefore, to give Darrow a C plus along with Crack-Down.

The contest lies between Don Richberg and a long-shot, Mr. Rosenblatt, a deputy administrator. The latter, indeed, was the surprise. Heretofore one to whom no attention had been paid, he shows considerable promise in the use of invective as well as being good at repartee. For example, Darrow asks for his resignation for the manner in which he handled the motion picture code and Rosenblatt as quick as a flash counters with the statement that he really performed a miracle.

The gentleman's confidence in himself is one thing that strikes our fancy. He said:

"Editorials in the trade press expressed the admiration of the industry, from the 'extra' in Hollywood, the chorus in the theater and the small theater owner, to the presidents of the large producing companies, for his energies during the harrowing months of negotiations."

It is pretty difficult to take a gentleman with such assurance as this from his feet. We shall undoubtedly hear more from him.

* * * *

We like his terms "acrobatic and audacious" which he flung at Darrow as well as his description of the report as based "solely upon the vicious mouthings, innuendoes and conjectures of a few disgruntled and disappointed enemies of the NRA . . ." This sounds like Crack-Down himself when he was at his best and being looked upon as the country's greatest invective thrower.

Rosenblatt weakens his effort though by the repeated use of "prejudice." Any student of invective or of just plain essay knows that too frequent use of the same word weakens the work.

* * * *

Richberg's paper was the painstaking effort of a man fired with a zeal to win. It reflects endless work at night and ponderousness of thought. It has not the airy flippancy of Rosenblatt nor does it seem to have been turned out with as much ease. Nevertheless, it is a studied approach to the subject and is still being examined by the judges along with Rosenblatt's work.

What is really delaying a decision is the question of whether it was not Richberg who put over Darrow for the review job. There have been intimations from time to time that Darrow was Senator Nye's selection, but there are now reports that the culprit was none other than Richberg himself.

If these reports prove to be true then it will be apparent that Richberg knew the questions in advance, so to speak, and he will, therefore, be disqualified.

Portrait of Tyler To Be Unveiled

Ceremony to Honor Noted Virginia Historian.

Richmond, May 21 (AP).—A portrait of Dr. Lyon G. Tyler, president-emeritus of the College of William and Mary and an eminent historian of Virginia, will be unveiled at the Virginia Historical Society here Saturday, it was announced today.

Dr. J. D. Eggleston, president of Hampden-Sydney College, will be the principal speaker in a formal recognition of Dr. Tyler's contributions to the history of his State.

Early in his career, Dr. Tyler became interested in colonial history of Virginia and secured an appropriation of $5,000 to pay for copies of old county records dealing with the period prior to 1700. As a result, 75 volumes were placed in the State Library. For many years he edited the William and Mary Quarterly and Historical Magazine, and on his retirement from the college in 1919 he established Tyler's Quarterly, which he still edits. He is the author of several books on historical subjects.

Norfolk Factory Blaze Is Probed

Norfolk, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Convinced that a firebug is operating here, representatives of the State fire marshal are investigating the mysterious blaze that razed the Norfolk Sash & Door Co.'s plant early yesterday.

William H. Mathews, company official, is positive the blaze was another of the series of supposedly incendiary fires which have destroyed half a dozen lumber plants and other buildings in the city in the past few months.

Damage to the plant is estimated at between $40,000 and $50,000.

Virginia Intermont Ceremonies Planned

Bristol, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—A celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of Virginia Intermont is bringing to the local college hundreds of former students, all of whom are to be special guests throughout the finals program.

The commencement activities opened with a play Saturday night and will close with graduation finals Wednesday morning. Yesterday was observed as baccalaureate Sunday, with Dr. George T. Waite, of Richmond, executive secretary of the Baptist Board of Missions and Education, preaching the sermon at the First Baptist Church.

Beaverdam High Will Graduate 11

Beaverdam, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Eleven students will be graduated from Beaverdam High School Friday night at exercises featuring a commencement address delivered by Lieut. Gov. James H. Price.

Dr. Edward Hopkins, of the Beaverdam Methodist Church, delivered the baccalureate address last night to begin the commencement exercises. Class day exercises will be held in the school auditorium Wednesday afternoon. The grade school closing exercises will be held Thursday night in the auditorium.

Frances Saunders Moss is valedictorian and Catherine Moody Clements salutatorian of the class, which is made up of the following: The Misses Moss and Clements, Virginia Louise Hall, Mary Frances Corker, Daisy Anne Winkler, Ruth Lucile Marks, Elizabeth Lee Garrett, Florence Elizabeth Garrett, Annie Mae Morris, Edward Henry Hopkins, jr., and James Thomas Redd.

465 to Graduate At Roanoke High

Roanoke, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—The Jefferson Senior High School here will graduate the largest class in its history, 465 students, at commencement exercises June 1.

Commencement at Hollins College will open June 2. The students will present Shakespeare's "As You Like It" in the Forest of Arden on the opening day.

Roanoke College commencement program also will open on June 2, with alumni gatherings to continue through the following Monday. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, will be the commencement speaker.

Commencement exercises of the Roanoke Evening School will be held Thursday night.

30 More Men to Work On Battlefield Park

Hanover Courthouse, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Thirty more men are expected to be employed on resumption of work soon on the Cold Harbor Battlefield Park, William S. Meredith, projects engineer of the Hanover Emergency Relief Administration, announces.

CCC workers from Fort Harrison Camp will help in the work, which will be supervised by K. A. Tapscott, Government assistant landscape architect. The FERA will provide $9,989 for the project, which will be of no expense to Hanover County.

Lancaster Physicians Examining Children

Lancaster, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Lancaster County physicians are examining school pupils this week in conjunction with a National drive by the parent-teacher associations to organize summer round-ups for all children who will enter school for the first time next fall.

The schedule of examinations in Lancaster County follows: White Stone and Kilmarnock, Monday; Irvington, Tuesday at 9 a. m.; Weems, Tuesday at 1 p. m.; Lively, Wednesday at 9 a. m.; Lancaster, Wednesday at 1 p. m., and Ottoman, Thursday at 9 a. m.

J. E. Currell Heads Tri-Town Rotary Club

Kilmarnock, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—J. E. Currell has been elected president of the Kilmarnock-Irvington-White Stone Rotary Club by the recently chosen board.

Other new officers include W. A. Eubank, jr., vice president; R. K. Whaley, secretary and treasurer; M. F. Nuckols, sergeant-at-arms, and H. C. Treakle, assistant. The new officers will take office July 1.

Danville Jury Gives Slayer 7-Year Term

Danville, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Jack Wilson, colored, was sentenced to serve seven years in the penitentiary by a corporation court jury today for killing Lucinda Hairston, last March. He claimed it was accidental.

Lee-Maury Class To Hear Blackwell

Bowling Green, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Dr. R. E. Blackwell, president of Randolph-Macon College, will deliver the commencement address to one of the largest graduating classes in the history of the Lee-Maury High School here, Friday night.

The Rev. J. T. Edwards, of Culpeper, delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the 20 seniors last night. The music department of the school will present an operetta Wednesday night.

Kilmarnock Vote On Water Plan Set

Kilmarnock, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—The bond issue for the proposed waterworks to be constructed here with the aid of the PWA will be voted on at the June 12 election, according to an order entered Saturday by Judge E. Hugh Smith, of the Circuit Court of Lancaster County.

An ordinance passed by the town council states that the town has been granted a PWA loan of $41,000 and a grant of approximately $9,000 to purchase the privately owned water system and enlarge, rebuild, and modernize it as a municipal system.

Bonds are proposed to be payable over 30 years and to bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent. Payment will be made at the rate of $1,000 the first 10 years; $1,500 for the next 18 years, and $2,000 for the final 2 years. L. A. Bodinek, of Bowling Green, has been engaged as engineer for the new water system.

Size Won't Save the Big Man If the Little One Has a Knife

By Robert Quillen

Once upon a time two races of people, one white and one yellow, lived side by side with only a strip of water between them.

The whites were rich and fat and soft, and they believed in peace because they had nothing to gain by fighting. They desired nothing more than an easy life—at public expense.

The yellows were hard-up, lean, crowded and accustomed to hardship. They believed warfare a noble and righteous business, for only by fighting could they hope to obtain the new territory they needed.

One day the yellow king said to the white king: "You talk of peace, yet you have more cannon than we have. That scares us and we shall try to build more. But you are richer and can easily keep ahead of us, so we'll agree to build only 700 if you'll build only 1,000."

"Glad to do it, son," said the white king. "My folks are peaceful and don't mean you any harm. And we'll quit building cannon just to show we are friendly."

Then the yellow people got busy and built the 700 cannon agreed upon, plus a few extra, but the white peole let their old ones rust and built only a few dozen new ones. And all of them got a little fatter and a little softer and thought up new ways to rob their government.

After a while the yellow king returned and said: "Your army is parked close to our border and it scares us. Please move it to the other side of your land, so it can't reach us for weeks."

And the white king chuckled and said: "Anything to oblige, little fellow. I'll move it at once, so you will have nothing to fear."

The army was moved. And then the yellow people invaded the land of the whites and began a dreadful slaughter.

The whites triumphed in the end, for they were richer and stronger, but millions were slain and all their treasure was exhausted.

The white king led his armies bravely to their final victory, and when peace was declared the people erected a monument in his honor.

National Maritime Day.

Today is National Maritime Day; the President issues a proclamation with the order so that (in the language of Bjornstjerne Bjornson) flags are flying in town and harbor.

Today also commemorates the 115th anniversary of the first Atlantic crossing by steam, when the S. S. Savannah, manned by a crew from New London, made the trip in 25 days.

It also marks the 100th anniversary of the vessel John Randolph, the first iron steamship in America and the second in the world.

As a landlubber, I have always wondered where I got my intense love of the sea, and an even intenser love of sea-stories; a friend reminded me of something I did not know—that my great-grandfather, Col. William Lyon, did a large business in ships of trade. Perhaps when they named me after him, something of his salty spirit entered my system.

I do not know how to sail a ship; though I have the rarer accomplishment of being able (and willing), to paddle my own canoe. To mind one's own business is becoming unusual.

However all this may be, I enjoy novels of the sea more than those on shore. I love to have the crew safely on board, drunk or sober; the tall ship tugged to the mouth of the harbor; to see the topsails fill, the ship take her list with a fresh breeze.

Therefore, so long as I live I shall be grateful to James Fenimore Cooper for writing "The Pilot," "The Red Rover," "The Two Admirals," "Water-Witch," to Dana for "Two Years Before the Mast," to Captain Marryat, to Clark Russell, to Stevenson, to Alan Villiers and others.

That indomitable old sea-dog, Farragut, was actually a midshipman at the age of 9 and in command of a vessel in the War of 1812, when he was 12 years old! Fifty years later he was an admiral in the Civil War; and here is a letter to his wife, written just as he was entering into the battle of New Orleans.

"As to being prepared for defeat, I certainly am not. Any man who is prepared for defeat would be half defeated before he commenced. I hope for success, shall do all in my power to secure it, and trust to God for the rest."

Col. Totten, Dr. Edgell Die in Buckhannon

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.). Deaths of two prominent West Virginians were listed today.

Col. W. G. L. Totten, 94, veteran lawyer of Buckhannon, and Union Civil War veteran, was dead at his home after an illness and Dr. E. E. Edgell, 72, retired physician and oil operator of the same city, was dead of a heart attack, having succumbed yesterday at a sanitarium at Takoma Park, Md., near Washington. The latter is survived by his widow and a son.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

THIS column, convinced at last, now bursts forth with its spring number—devoted to the gentle art of poetry and the songs of little birds.

Louis Untermeyer, poetic anthologist of the first rank, and Carter Davidson, of the department of English in Carleton College, had an idea for a new kind of combined study and anthology. So they have given us "Poetry: Its Appreciation and Enjoyment" (Harcourt Brace, $3.50).

THEO. L. A.I.

Now it is not very new to divide poetry according to subject-matter (see, for one thing, "The Week-End Book"), nor according to purposes (see Robert Haven Schauffler's "The Poetry Cure") nor according to meter and rhyme scheme (see almost any study of poetic form). But to arrange close to 500 poems and generous excerpts from poems on a wide frame of ideas, to list more than as many again under the same categories, to discourse ably and instructively on each category, and to make all the matter instantly available by excellent cross-indexing, is certainly to create a new form of approach. The authors have made a honey of a book, a complete Baedeker to the intelligent appreciation of poetry.

* * * *

Poetry, they assert incontrovertibly, "is not merely expression, but communion." Communion of what? Twenty-seven definitions which they have collected from all sources suggest an answer. But the best ticketing of the poet's material appears in a sentence by Archibald MacLeish, part of the motto passage: "He (the poet) works with the overobvious, the too-apparent, the phenomena which men can not see because they are so close that vision blurs." Like eye-glasses, poetry corrects man's dull, habitual hypermetropia of the mind, and helps him to see what lies under his nose.

At the outset the authors deal with the very first of these obviousnesses, and defend poetry from the prejudice that it is abnormal, highbrow and meaningless, and effeminate. Then they attempt to define poetry, and to show its difference from prose.

In full swing now, they divide poetry according to its experiences and emotions—the poem as picture and as story, comedy and tragedy, human emotions, emotions in the face of nature, the poem as philosophy, satirical poetry, and light poetry. The second half of the book deals with poetry from the point of view of structure and technique.

But this, of course, is only the sheerest outline. You will have to imagine the wealth of example as the authors subdivide down. Take "the poem as picture" alone—under that come the pigeon-holes of color and image, shape and line, movement, sound and silence, and touch, taste and smell. And in the pigeon-hole of those last three senses we find Hilda Doolittle's "Heat," mention of Keats' famed gustatory sense, a passage on smells from John Gay, Rupert Brooke's "The Great Lover," Richard Le Gallienne's "A Ballade Catalogue of Lovely Things," Thoreau's "Smoke," Sandburg's "Smoke and Steel," and George Meredith's "Love in the Valley." And so with each category, whether poetic portraits, love, hedonism, or the sonnet.

I suppose the authors' catholic and vivacious tastes are best shown by the section on light verse, which we don't often see in a general anthology. Here I'd like to quote everything from Locker-Lampson's poem on his mistress' boots to F. P. A.'s. "On the Day After Christmas."

You remember that not long back A. E. Housman wrote that while he shaved he had to keep his mind from poetry, or else "my skin prickles so that the razor ceases to act." David McCord hit this off neatly in "A Stropshire Lad." One stanza:

"With foamy lips, and mouthy
Of Latin verbs and Greek,
I'd say a little Southey
And shave the other cheek."

I hope there's space for the two shortest poems in English. This by Strickland Gillilan, entitled "On the Antiquity of Microbes:"

"Adam
Had 'em."

"I . . .
Why?"

But you'll have to get the book yourself, and roam down as pleasant a highway as has been laid out into the province of poetry.

* * * *

Now for that other spring-time topic, the twitterings of birds. Albert Brand, of Cornell University and the American Museum of Natural History, has done something for the first time in the world—he has made electrical recordings of bird-song in the field.

"Song of Wild Birds" (Nelson, $2) tells very simply of his myriad difficulties, discusses bird-song generally, and describes the songs of 35 species. But the "piece de resistance" lies in an envelope at the end of the book—a pair of small double-faced records which give the proof of the pudding, ready for you to play on your own phonograph.

Bird-lovers will go for this book as a cat does for catnip. I recommend it from A to Z.

MELLOWED BY AGE
Enriched by Tradition
Fine beer can't be made over night. Behind fine beer must be age—and tradition. BUDWEISER is richly endowed with both. Anheuser-Busch began brewing in 1859. BUDWEISER was created in 1876. Its unforgettable quality was so outstanding that in the International Exposition in Paris in '78 it won first honors from all the brews of the world. It was awarded the gold medal at the World's Fair in Philadelphia in 1876, at Amsterdam in 1883, at New Orleans in 1885 and Chicago in 1893. BUDWEISER's greatest distinction never has been matched by any other brew anywhere—the biggest selling bottled beer in history.

White House To Witness Busy Week

Visitors, Garden Parties, Dinners Scheduled Almost Every Day.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

As usual, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt have a busy week ahead of them with visitors, meetings, luncheons, garden parties or dinners almost every day.

Last evening the President and Mrs. Roosevelt had as their guests over night, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Morgan and their small son, who arrived at the White House yesterday afternoon from Hyde Park, where they are neighbors of the Chief Executive and First Lady. Also dining at the White House last evening was Mr. John Johanssen, who later in the evening made a painting of his hosts in the President's study on the second floor.

Today the Rev. Dr. James Wilson, rector of the Episcopal Church at Hyde Park, will arrive with Mrs. Wilson and their two young sons, to remain two days at the White House.

To Attend Garden Party.

Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the garden party which the Women's Democratic Club will give tomorrow afternoon at Highwood, the home of the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, and later that day Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher will arrive for a brief visit at the White House.

On Thursday evening the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at a dance for newspaper men and women when arrangements will be similar to those of last year when the members of the press were entertained. The Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner will dine with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt preceding the dance, and later the President and the Vice President will sit on one side of the east room, while Mrs. Roosevelt, assisted by Mrs. Garner, will receive the guests as they enter the room. Costumes of the guests and the hosts will be in keeping with the warm weather.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at the annual garden party for disabled veterans on Friday. On Sunday evening, the First Lady, accompanied by Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, will leave for Alderson, W. Va., and will go from there to New York for a week's stay.

To Speak at Gettysburg.

The President will make an address at Gettysburg on Memorial Day, and the following day, May 31, will join Mrs. Roosevelt in New York, where he will review the fleet. Mrs. Roosevelt will be in New York for the commencement of the Todhunter School next week, and, after the review of the fleet, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will leave for Groton, Mass., to witness the graduation of their youngest son, John, from the Groton School on June 1. The following day the President will make an address at the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the school.

That night, the Chief Executive and Mrs. Roosevelt will go to their Hyde Park home to spend Sunday, the President returning to Washington on Monday, June 4, unless Congress adjourns before that time. Mrs. Roosevelt will join the President at the White House Tuesday, June 5, and on June 6 will go to Elkins, W. Va., to attend the graduation exercises at the Davis-Elkins College. She will return to Washington June 8.

The First Lady plans to attend the boat races at Philadelphia on June 22, when her son, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., will be a member of the Harvard crew. Both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the Harvard-Yale boat races later in June.

House of Mercy Party Thursday

Mrs. Erwin in Charge of Flower Table.

Always one of the loveliest features of a garden party, the flower table this year at the annual garden party of the House of Mercy, to be held in the Cathedral Close on Thursday from 2 to 7 o'clock, promises to be perhaps the most beautiful of this annual event. This year it will be in charge of Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, who will be assisted by her mother, Mrs. Delos Blodgett, and her sister, Mrs. Pierre Gaillard. Other members of her committee will be Mrs. Mary Grant Rafter, Miss Reay Mackay and Miss Laverne Yengst.

In case of rain the fete will be held on Friday afternoon instead of Thursday.

Senora De Sacasa To Be Visitor Here

Nicaraguan First Lady Will Attend Graduation.

Within the next few days Washington society will welcome two popular ladies who will arrive from Central America, Senora de Sacasa, wife of the President of Nicaragua, and her daughter Senorita Maria Sacasa, who left Managua Sunday by plane for the United States via Merida, Yucatan and Miami. They will come to Washington to spend some time and to attend the graduation exercises at Georgtown University, when young Senor Juan Sacasa, son of the President and Senora de Sacasa will be among the graduates.

OFFICIAL and RESIDENT

Society Notes

The dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and Lady Lindsay will be the guests of honor at the dinner to be given Friday evening by the Minister of Canada and Mrs. Herridge.

The Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, will entertain at dinner in the embassy this evening in honor of Commendatore Leonardo Vitetti and his bride, the former Miss Natalie Coe, of New York, who are spending several days in Washington on their wedding trip.

The Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye were hosts at a delightful supper dance last evening at the embassy on Sixteenth street, in honor of the officers and midshipmen of the French training ship Jeanne d'Arc.

Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan, entertained at a luncheon yesterday in the embassy, when her guests were Mrs. William H. Taft, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Chester C. Bolton, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Jay Pierrepont Moffat, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Joseph Strauss, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Morris Evans, Miss Meta Morris Evans, Miss Elizabeth Johnson, and the wives of the members of the embassy staff. Covers were laid for 20 guests.

Mme. Thenault Guest Of Honor Tonight.

The Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik will entertain at an informal dinner this evening in the legation in honor of Mme. Thenault, wife of Lieut. Col. George Thenault, the former Air Attache of the French Embassy, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment at their home on Wyoming avenue.

The Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi will leave the Capital this morning for New York, where they will remain for about a week before returning to Washington.

The early part of next month they will sail for Europe to spend the summer, returning to Washington in the autumn.

The Minister of China and Mme. Sze will return to Washington today after spending the week-end in New York.

The Minister of Persia and Mme. Djalal will be hosts at dinner this evening when their guests will include the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyonovsky and the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern.

Mrs. David A. Reed Postpones Party.

Mrs. David Aiken Reed, wife of Senator Reed, due to her absence from the city, has postponed the tea which she had planned for this afternoon in honor of the ladies of the press, until next Tuesday.

The Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Wladyslaw Sokolowski left Washington yesterday for Philadelphia where he will be the guest of the Curtis Institute of Music. Today he will make an address at the meeting when Mme. Sembrica Kochanska, noted Polish singer, will be presented a degree by the head of the institute.

Mrs. William Howard Taft will be the honor guest at the luncheon to be given today at the Mayflower Hotel by Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey, wife of former Representative Dempsey of New York.

General and Mrs. Robert I. Rees have come from their home in New York, and are at the Shoreham to remain until Friday.

The former Comptroller of the Currency and Mrs. Henry M. Dawes, of Evanston, Ill., have arrived to spend several days in Washington, and are guests at the Shoreham, where they have been joined by their son, Mr. Curtis Dawes, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Lieut. and Mrs. Lynn C. Petross were the guests of honor at bridge supper party Friday evening by Lieut. and Mrs. Preston G. Lock in their home in San Diego, Calif.

Noted Sociologist And Educator Here.

Dr. and Mrs. Everett D. Martin, of New York City, are spending the week in Washington as guests at the Shoreham. Dr. Martin, noted sociologist and educator, is attending the meetings of the American Association for Adult Education in convention this week in the Capital.

Lieut. Russell A. Warner, of Schenectady is at the Willard and expects to be in Washington for several days. Lieut. James W. Mosteller, who is stationed at Fort Totten, N. Y., is also at the Willard.

Word has reached Washington from Japan of the wedding of Miss Dorothy Forrant and Lieut. A. D. Blackledge, U. S. N., which took place in Tokyo on April 24.

Lieut. and Mrs. Blackledge will leave the Asiatic station this summer and come to Washington, where the former has been assigned for duty.

Mrs. A. Alex Shuford has returned to her apartment in the Mayflower Hotel from Hickory, N. C., to remain for several weeks.

Miss Stearns Becomes Bride At St. John's

Historic old St. John's Church at Lafayette Square was the scene of a beautiful wedding yesterday afternoon when Miss Frances Peabody Stearns, daughter of Maj. Cuthbert Powell Stearns, U. S. A., and Mrs. Stearns, became the bride of Mr. Paul Churchill Hutton, of the American Foreign Service, son of Mrs. Hutton and the late Col. Paul Churchill Hutton, Medical Corps, U. S. A. The church was decorated with marked simplicity, the only flowers being a large wreath of white blossoms on the altar. The Rev. F. Bland Tucker performed the ceremony at 4:30 o'clock.

Miss Sara Hutton, of New York, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Virginia Elizabeth Stokes, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Marcus B. Stokes, were the bridesmaids. They wore dainty frocks of pale blue chiffon over taffeta, made on flowing lines with cowl necklines falling into short capelets across the back. Narrow ruffles of the chiffon cascaded down the back forming brief trains. Their large garden hats of leghorn were trimmed with French flowers, and they carried armfuls of yellow gladiolius tied with yellow streamers.

Miss Norris Maid of Honor.

Miss Polly Norris, of Baltimore, the maid of honor, followed the bridesmaids. Her frock, of the same summer fashion as those worn by the other attendants, was of peach colored chiffon. With this she wore a large picture hat of brown horsehair straw, trimmed with French flowers. Her bouquet of peach gladiolius was tied with brown tulle.

The bride entered the church with her father, who gave her in marriage. She wore her mother's bridal costume. The gown of white satin was made on flaring lines, the long skirt falling into a fan-shaped train. The seleeves, full at the shoulders, were of duchess lace to the elbows, where the satin was looped in and loosely draped to the wrists. Her veil of tulle and rare old lace was caught into a pointed Queen Anne's cap of the lace trimmed with a chaplet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Lieut. John L. Chamberlain, jr., of Fort Myer, Va., served as best man for Mr. Hutton. The ushers were Mr. William Moreland and Mr. George V. Allen, who are in the American Foreign Service with the bridegroom.

Informal Reception Held.

Immediately following the ceremony there was an informal reception at the home of Maj. and Mrs. Stearns on Calvert street, for the two families, the bridal party and intimate friends. The drawing rooms were decorated with clusters of early summer flowers. The bride and bridegroom were assisted in receiving by their mothers. Mrs. Stearns had on a becoming gown of acquamarine net, with which she wore a black hat trimmed with pastel shaded flowers and a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Hutton was wearing a printed chiffon gown and a dark hat. Her corsage was of gardenias and sweet peas.

Later Mr. Hutton and his bride left on their wedding trip, the latter wearing a smart two-piece suit of navy blue georgette with a ballibuntl straw hat and accessories of the same blue. They will spend some time traveling abroad until Mr. Hutton receives word of his next station.

Mrs. Hutton is a granddaughter of the Governor of Colorado and Mrs. James Hamilton Peabody and of the late Mr. John Lloyd Stearns and Mrs. Stearns, of Colorado, and is the niece of the former Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. James Grafton Rogers. She attended St. Mary's College in Texas and made her debut in 1932 at the Bachelors' Cotillion in Baltimore.

Mr. Hutton was graduated from the United States Military Academy with the class of 1926 and shortly after his graduation resigned from the Army to enter the Foreign Service. He returned to this country early in the spring from Bombay, India, where he served as American Vice Counsul.

Polish Ambassador Entertains Officers

The Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Patek, entertained at luncheon yesterday for three young Polish officers who are among those on the French training ship Jeanne d'Arc, which is docked in Annapolis. The officers are Lieut. Kovirvycki, Lieut. Sagajllo and Lieut. Joraki.

The other guests at the luncheon were Lieut. Feyguini, another officer from the Jeanne d'Arc; Capt. Louis Sable, naval attache of the French Embassy; Col. Emmanuel Lombard, military attache of the French Embassy; Col. Charles Burnett, U. S. A.; Lieut. Diggs Logan, U. S. N., and Lieut. Arthur H. McCollum, U. S. N.

Thrift Shop's Street Party To Be Friday

Mrs. John R. Williams Is Chairman of the Committee.

With Mrs. John Allan Dougherty as "Master of the Street," the Thrift Shop Carnival, scheduled for Friday afternoon and evening, promises to be one of the most picturesque outdoor events ever staged in Washington. The block from Connecticut avenue to Nineteenth on Q streets will be blocked off from traffic during the carnival.

As chairman of the Thrift Shop committee, Mrs. John R. Williams will direct the show, including booths, soft drink stands, sidewalk cafes and other attractions to delight the old and young, ending with a street dance in the evening.

All those connected with the carnival will wear gypsy costumes, to add to the picturesqueness of the party.

Mr. Raymond T. Baker and eleven other gentlemen comprise the "tin-cup gang," in charge of the beer stand. Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney and members of her committee will serve plate lunches in the Three Musketeers; Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro will have the flower booth, with flowers contributed from many of the most beautiful gardens in Washington, among them that of Mrs. Robert Bliss Woods. Mrs. Joseph H. Himes will be in charge of the soft-drink stand.

Members of Mrs. Taliaferro's committee include Mrs. Mason Scott, Mrs. John Parker, Mrs. Earl Briscoe, Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Walter Distler and Mrs. John McClure.

Proceeds from the carnival will go toward the fund of the five-member organization of the Thrift Shop, the Children's Hospital, the Children's Country Homes, the Child Welfare, the Pre-natal Clinic of Columbia Hospital and the Junior League, for its Children's Hospital fund.

A small admission fee for the "block" party will be charged and Washingtonians are invited to come and enjoy themselves.

Miss Beatrice Patton To Be Bride June 27

Miss Beatrice Patton, attractive daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. George S. Patton, jr., has selected Wednesday, June 27, as the date for her wedding to Lieut. John Knight Waters, U. S. A. The ceremony will take place in St. John's Church in Beverly Farms, Mass.

Monday, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Patton and Miss Patton will leave Washington for New York to attend the graduation of Miss Ruth Ellen Patton from the Masters School at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y.

Dance Tonight Is to Honor "My Maryland"

Former Senator Lee Will Speak at Entertainment.

This is a year of celebrations in Maryland, and for Marylanders, for it is the 300th anniversary of the settlement of the State and the landing of the first colonists with Lord Calvert, the first Governor of the Province, appointed by Cecil Calvert, the second Lord Baltimore.

The Maryland Society of Washington will have another "tercentenary" entertainment and dance this evening at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments. Former Senator Blair Lee, of Maryland, will make an address on the Maryland flag, which will be the principal feature of the evening. Mrs. Henry S. Winters will play "Maryland, My Maryland" on the piano, and all the members of the society and their guests will sing their State song.

In the receiving line will be former Senator Lee, Mrs. George Calvert, jr., wife of the president of the society; the Commissioner of the District of Columbia and Mrs. Melvin H. Hazen, the President of the University of Maryland and Mrs. Raymond A. Pearson, and Maj. and Mrs. E. Brooke Lee. Mr. Calvert will make the introductions.

On the floor committee will be Admiral C. H. T. Lowndes, chairman; Maj. William Bowie, Mr. John M. Boteler, Mr. Robert G. Merritt, Dr. J. W. Bird, Mr. William H. Brooke, Mr. H. C. Byrd, Mr. William A. Carr, Mr. Hal B. Clagett, Mr. Charles D. Drayton, Mr. George B. Gough, Mr. L. Carroll Haydn, Dr. Francis J. Hemelt, Mr. Wilbur W. Hubbard, Mr. Alexander Y. Johnson, Mr. George Amory Maddox, Mr. J. V. Morgan, Dr. S. B. Muncaster, Mr. William H. Plummer, Mr. William Tyler Page, Mr. S. Marvin Peach and Mr. Lansdale G. Sasscer.

Card Party Benefit Friday at Stratford

Considerable interest is being shown in the card party for the benefit of Stratford, which will be given by the District of Columbia Chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy, Friday evening at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Mrs. G. H. Alexander is in charge of the arrangements. Those who are on the committee are Mrs. T. T. Carter, Mrs. Frances Embrey, Mrs. Spigall, Mrs. Ralph Howell, Mrs. Garnet Lee, Mrs. Eugene Rollings, Mrs. John Roberts, Miss Florence Sweet, Mrs. R. B. Whitehurst, Mrs. Rosa Wood and Mrs. Livingston Vann.

AVAST! No more listing to the starboard. Take soundings. Chart a course on the summer bound nautical vogue!

Seaworthy two-piece suits are the things for voyages or for lounging on a beach. These include the dark blue shorts, trimmed on either side with white stripes and an anchor on one leg, and a double thick white wool bandeau top with no back, that fastens with a tie around the neck.

One of the best buys in a sea going way is the linen skirt for $1.95, to be worn with a flannel jacket, $3.95. The skirt buttons jauntily down the front and is plain and tailored. The jackets have mannish lapels and patch pockets.

White pique dresses with sailor collars have a real navy air. These may be bought in one or two pieces for $3.95.

Two style swimming bags are primed for the beach. One is made from vari-colored anchor print. Another of white duck is a duffle bag that can be swung over the shoulder by a long twisted rope. Its ample proportions were designed to contain an entire beach wardrobe.

A terry cloth cape may be worn like a Roman toga or allowed to hang loosely fastened around the neck with a navy blue cord. The only trim is a large blue anchor along one side.

Knitted berets come large or small. Some have the small anchor trim, others are surmounted with a French navy puff.

You Can Do It Yourself.

Making a dress yourself isn't half hard until it comes to the hem marking time. Then the trouble begins.

Makeshift methods result in uneven length, taking out and putting in. Repetition of this soon turns the dress into a real nusiance.

A remedy for such inconvenience lies in the notions' department of a downtown store. It is known as the magic skirt marker. Slip a clamp on the edge of the door so that a small spout lies the proper inches from the floor. Stand close to this with the skirt touching. Press a little bulb connected by a hose to the clamp. A white or colored erasable mark appears on the material. Turn, and repeat. In a few seconds the hem is marked, the impossible has been achieved!

Antique—Still Made.

It was surprising to find an interesting antique sitting in the midst of modern goods. It was equally surprising that the antique should be a box of fingernail tint.

The label is a giddy looking affair bearing the information "last lable 1887." There are directions which say the tint is for use on nails, cheeks and lips. Because it has a very faint color, girls who do not care for rouge, and elderly ladies who are a bit shy about it find such a tint to their liking.

Another of these old products manufactured by the same doctor is for removing stains from skin and nails. Besides these two there is a powder nail polish, a trifle more modern. Its last label was 1890.

Sporty Handbags.

Community cloth bags are dapper. They have a style and a sportiness that is making them fashion favorites. What with swagger coats and tailored frocks appearing in such numbers, they have a definite place in a woman's wardrobe.

An F street shop has lots of them in enough varieties to suit everyone. Colors begin with biege and end with black. Each bag is trimmed with a large wooden button, inlaid with composition, colored to blend with the fabric of the bag.

Before and After.

A Washington woman who has created a line of cosmetics is conduting an unusual experiment. One of her creams is based on an old formula and embodies certain Oriental balsams. Speaking of it she says, "It's virtue is based on vegetable compounds that have the quality of stimulating the outer texture of the skin. The balsams have a direct influence on pentrating subcutaneous skin, creating circulation, revivifying the dormant layers of the skin, effecting a rejuvenating process, and giving the face a youthful healthy glow."

Each night now for a week she has spread this cream over one side of her face, with the result that this side differs from the other in an absence of wrinkles and a silky skin.

Next visit downtown, drop by and see her. Be sure to ask about her molding cream.

Restaurant Group Sponsors Movement To Feed the Public What It Orders

By Susan Mills.

HOW CAN you be sure you get real chicken in chicken croquettes? Was your last restaurant-mixed dry Martini made with the proper kind of gin? When you order fillet of sole do you get fillet of sole or haddock?

J. Allen Praether, president of the Washington Restaurant Association and chairman of the local restaurant code authority, intends to straighten out these questions and give the public what the public should have. The problem will be considered at a meeting of the association May 29.

"Among other things," said Mr. Praether, "we want to make it impossible, by law, for a restaurant to serve chicken croquettes made of veal, or in any way to misrepresent the foods served.

"Take a cocktail list. The ingredients are given so the customer will know what he is getting. We want to put the food menus on the same basis. All restaurants who list chicken chow mein on their menus must have chicken in the chow mein, not just the little strips on the top. Otherwise they should call it Chinese Chow Mein and be done with it.

Public Unprotected.

"As things are now, the public has no protection. If kitchens are subject to Federal inspection and certain legal regulations, all restaurants will operate on the same honest basis and the public can't be fooled.

"Another thing the association wants to do: the District sanitary regulations haven't been revised since 1915. In the meantime, restaurant equipment has been improved to such an extent that the regulations don't fit. For instance, there is an automatic glass washer that will sterilize the glassware in a few seconds. The regulations say all dishes must be allowed to sit in boiling water for a number of minutes. Therefore, we can't use the glass washer and be within the law.

"But there's one thing the sanitary regulations do not include. There is no requirement that makes it necessary for a girl applying for a job as waitress to present a health certificate. There's nothing that says she must be as clean as possible before she goes on duty. After all, you want the persons who serve you to be as clean as your are.

Doesn't Approve Tipping.

"I, personally, don't believe in tips. Tipping came over from the other side; it isn't an American habit. Waitresses should be adequately paid by the management for their service. One doesn't tip a clerk in a department store. Why should one tip a waitress for the same services?

"What about the liquor regulations?" Mr. Praether was asked.

His blue eyes widened and his voice dropped to a crisp whisper. "They're awful! Simply awful. Couldn't be worse!"

"This hidden bar business does so much damage. How can the customer know what he is getting? Furthermore, the average customer knows so much more about the mixing of drinks than the person who mixes them. I'm not speaking of bartenders, though there are few who know what they're doing. I'm speaking of the waitresses. Of course they mix the drinks!

"I don't approve of the old saloon standards. I ran a saloon in Chicago and I know what they're like. I don't advocate rowdyism. But if the bar could be put out in the open, and all drinks served by others than the bartender—waiters or waitresses—the public would have protection against insanitation and fraud.

"How Do You Know?"

"Suppose you order on old-fashioned. How do you know that piece of orange wasn't dropped on the floor? How do you know the cherries are kept in sanitary containers? Few people know there are three kinds of gin; dry, sloe, and straight. Each is used for different kinds of drinks. How do you know, if you order a cocktail, that you are getting the proper kind of gin?

"But there's one thing prohibition has done for us. It has made it possible for men and women to drink together. A man used to say to his wife, 'You run on down to the restaurant while I stop in and get a drink.' That's bad, and I never did like it.

Liquor Makes Money.

"The liquor business always brought in the money. In the old days it was the saloon keeper who made the largest charitable donations. More than one church steeple was built with the town saloon keeper's money. Today as well, money is going into circulation through the selling of alcohol. People will always buy drinks.

"But if we can make the drinks correct by law and make the menus legitimate by law, we'll do a lot to keep the public healthy. In a few weeks one bad restaurant can do damage that takes a doctor several months to undo."

Take Chicken Croquettes: Are They of Chicken? Frequently Not.

Gourmets Use Real Victuals, Not Sandwich

Society for Promoting Better Living Has Annual Luncheon.

NEW YORK, May 21 (U.P.).—"Americans have become a nation of sandwich eaters."

J. George Frederick, a plump gentleman who believes in practicing what he preaches, pursed his cheeks into two perfect balloons, thumped a table, and brought a meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Better Living to order here today.

The meeting was a luncheon attended by some of the Nation's more capable victual-shovelers.

Mr. Frederick's speech was just an incident. The chief business of the society—described as "an organization of gourmets and cosmopolites"—was eating.

This Is the Menu.

This is what they ate:

Potpourie of sea food—served with half a lime. You squeeze the lime juice on the dead sea beasties.

Gay nineties mutton chop—broiled over a grill. You place kidney in the center of the chop, wrap the flap around it, salt and pepper thoroughly, sear quickly, then place in a broiler with a lump of butter on it and cook slowly for 40 minutes. Serve with bacon prepared separately.

Mammoth baked potato—must be from Idaho. Secret's to cook it 40 minutes; butter, salt, Mexican pepper on the side.

Still More Food.

Demi-tasse—made fresh. Stood 20 minutes on the stove to allow flavor and aroma to "settle."

Ale, red wine, brandy.

All the gourmets are Americans. Who said sandwich eaters?

The Talking Sparrow Murders

BY DARWIN TEILHET

The Story So Far.

"A sparrow down there spoke to me. It said distinctly, 'Help! I'm caught!'" With these strange words an old man stopped Tatson, American engineer, who had just finished a job near Heidelberg, as he was crossing the Plockenstrasse. Then the old man dropped dead, shot through the stomach. Carlson, Tatson's associate at the plant, did his best, but Kresch, chief of police, insisted on detaining the young American as a material witness. It was obvious that if Tatson was to get back to the United States in time to hold a job which had been promised him he would have to help solve the murder, for Kresch wouldn't believe the story about a talking sparrow. According to the papers, the murdered man, Kohlmann, who was a prominent industrialist, had been killed by Communists, but the Nazi papers always blamed everything on the Communists. The next day a man sneaked into Tatson's room and tried to shoot him. Later he thought he identified this man as Taubek, the well-known Nazi commander, who was going to deliver the funeral oration for the late Herr Kahlmann. Tatson determined to go to the funeral and make sure. In the meanwhile, stopping at a restaurant in a nearby park, he encountered Spalger, the assistant plant manager at Swetzingen, very drunk. Spalger confessed that he was waiting to see a girl who sometimes drove in the park.

Now let Tatson himself go on with the story:

"SEE HERE, old man, it's—you mustn't misunderstand. I shouldn't say dangerous. No, it's not politic. That's the word. To be frank, to be honest she is—well, she is Herr Geigen's mistress. But you mustn't tell him."

"Oh—then he doesn't know?"

"Now, see here, old man. I mean you mustn't tell him that I'm in love with her. You see it's awkward. Awkward for you, too. If Herr Geigen should find out we're interested in his mistress it might anger him so that he wouldn't buy the plant."

"I'm not interested in this girl, Spalger. But you'd better be careful."

He pondered over this warning, finally stated: "Oh, I will be careful. However, I have fallen in love with her. I come here every day hoping to see her. Are you going to sit here long?"

"I don't know."

"I tell you, old fellow, if you were a real friend—I mean if you were tactful—you wouldn't want to sit here long."

"She might appear any time?"

"That's it."

I got up and started back through the park on my way to the funeral, following one of the little side paths which wound past a pine tree overlooking the inn, and as I approached the pine tree a slanting, narrow head looked out at me from behind it.

Man Was Startled.

I jumped for him, shouting: "I want to see you, Herr Taubek!" and the Nazi leader acted as if some one had exploded a piece of dynamite under his feet. He jumped away from the pine tree, ran down the path like a lizard sliding on ice and was away from me before I had time to wonder what it was all about.

I pulled out my newspaper and examined Taubek's photograph. It was the same man, all right. I decided to go back to the restaurant and telephone Kresch in Heidelberg at once. If I could only prove that Taubek was responsible for Kohlmann's murder, then I might have a chance to leave for my new job by the 10th of April, nine days off.

I ran rapidly down the incline toward the Weinkellar. As I walked up the steps of the Weinkellar I saw Spalger swaying before a girl whose back was to me. He approached her, hands clumsily outstretched, and she dodged with surprising agility and fetched him a crack over his nose and right eye. This halted him.

I hurried up.

Spalger hung on to a chair for support, his head dropped and swung back and forth and he glared at me and then at the girl.

Spalger Raised Trouble.

I turned to her. She was straightening her hat. "If this is your friend you'd better take him away." She was very cool and looked up at me out of long, deep, black eyes. She spoke German with the same inflection and soft accent I'd heard students from Austria give to their words.

"Take him home to his mother."

Spalger grasped her by the arm. "No you don't," he said thickly. "You've been playing with me for days. 'Im not going to stand for it any longer."

"Don't mind him," I said to her. I tried to take his arm. "Come on, Spalger, let's go." I spoke in English.

Spalger had had more than I suspected. He doubled up his fist, suddenly smacked me in the chest and I let go. He trotted after the girl who had started down the pathway. He had several 50-mark notes in his hand.

I turned to Spalger. "Come along, Spalger. We'll find something to do. We'll get a drink."

I thought that would strike him as a pretty sound and reasonable suggestion, but it missed fire with him completely. I will say for him he knew what he wanted. He scratched out at me, ducked away and started loping after her. She was stepping into an inclosed Mercedes, a long, green affair, as he came up to her for the second time. I caught him by the shoulder. He tried to grab her. She pulled her coat around her and opened the door of her car.

He shoved the money at her and shouted, "How much do you want? I'm going to get a hundred thousand marks." He tried to climb in after her. "I'm going to be wealthy too. We can go to the Riviera."

Penalty Doubles.

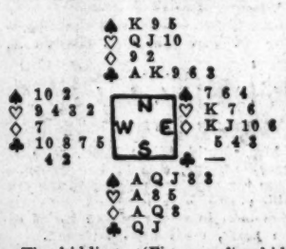
An example of an early and unwise Double by which a Slam was sacrificed and only a slight penalty secured occurred in a rubber game at Crockford's Club, New York, recently.

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1♣	1◇ (1)	Dbl. (2)	Pass
Pass (3)	Pass

1—A justifiable Overcall. East has a seven-card suit and a large penalty is improbable, even if opponents double.

2—South has many better calls available, one being the bid of two spades. An alternative would be two diamonds.

3—North can scarcely bid further. His partner's Penalty Double suggests that there is very slight prospect of game.

In the play East was defeated only two tricks—250 points—where as North and South could have bid and made a Slam.

North	East	South	West
1♣	1◇	2♠	Pass
3♠	Pass	4NT	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

This bidding is logical. As a matter of fact, against any Opening except a club, seven can be made, and in tournament play the hand might well be played at notrump, although it is doubtful if a Grand Slam should be bid.

What Today Means

"Gemini"

If May 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.

This May 22 should prove a good one for you. Everything that requires your personal attention will require comparatively little effort to be satisfactorily completed.

If a woman and May 22 is your birthday, your natural enthusiasm will carry you over the rough spots of life to success.

The child born on May 22, as soon as it reaches school age, will have to be taught the importance of concentration. Children, born on this date, having vivid imaginations are apt to overindulge in day dreams.

The man born on May 22 is, as a rule, a remarkably good-humored individual, possessing a great deal of natural wit, besides ability to accomplish what he sets out to do. If this is your natal day, you are inclined to be too easily influenced by the fair sex. Flattery is very gratifying, but it can prove costly, if allowed to sway business judgment. If this trait of character is not permitted to dominate your actions, your success is assured.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Pasteurizing Milk at Home.

N. E. McKinnon of the University of Toronto gives the following methods for home pasteurization of milk:

1. Heat milk in a double boiler to 145 degrees Fahrenheit. When the milk reaches that temperature the boiler is pushed to the back of the stove and left there for thirty minutes. In this location the milk remains well above 115 degrees for the 30-minute period. After this time the milk is cooled as rapidly as possible, ice being used when available, and then it is to be kept cold until used.

This method requires no equipment except a double boiler, which most families have, and a simple themometer reasonably accurate and costing about 60 cents.

2. Bring the milk to the boiling point. Then cool at once.

In the second method there is some scum formation and the milk acquires a cooked taste. Neither of these is of any importance except that some users may consider the product less appealing.

The second method appears superficially to be a boiling rather than a pasteurizing method. However, the milk is not allowed to boil. "Coming to the boiling point" means that some part of the milk has reached 212 degrees of heat. Probably the bulk of it is not above 200 and some is less warm, for heating is never uniform.

Partially fill a boiler with hot water. Place a spoon on the bottom. Set a container, partially filled with milk, in the hot water. The bottom of the container should be lifted away from the bottom of the boiler by the spoon. Set the boiler on the stove and heat until the milk reaches 145 degrees. Push the boiler to the back of the stove and leave there for 30 minutes. Cool as rapidly as possible.

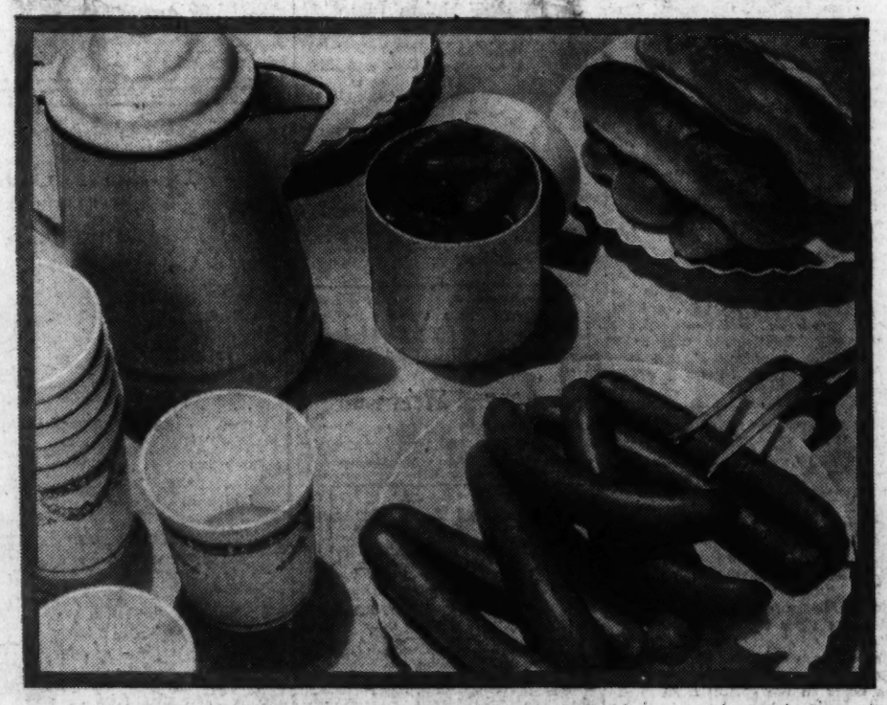
Franks Will Soon Scent Open Spaces



Picnic Days Are Coming; Better Start Planning the Menus.

By Ann Barrett.

MEMORIAL DAY, May 30 marks the great outdoor cooking season—when millions of people (including the first family of the land) will take to sizzling their own meals over an open fire. Franks and Hamburgers. Steak and onions on a stick. Ham and eggs is a long-handled fry pan.

These cooking-out sprees must be well-planned. And that means making the fire in plenty of time so that it may burn down to a bed of glowing coals; and not trying to cook many things over it, unless you are an expert. It's a good idea to get your coffee out of the way first, and here's how to do it.

Outdoor Coffee.

Have along with you a good-sized coffee pot (or saucepan with tight cover) and ¼ pound coffee tied in a square of cheesecloth large enough to let the coffee expand at least three times it bulk. Put 2 quarts of cold water in the pot or pan, drop in the bag of coffee and let soak an hour or two. Then put the coffee on the fire, bring it to a boil, and let it simmer three minutes. Next, pull out the coffee bag and throw in ½ cup cold water to settle the coffee. Then let it stand where it will keep hot but not boil.

Those Hot-dogs.

The easiest way to cook the hot-dogs is to let each one toast his own on a long stick. Either plain or wrapped in bacon. But another good way to cook them is between the two parts of an old-fashioned wire toaster or broiler. And this way you can have them a bit fancier. Say split lengthwise, spread with mustard, filled with paper-thin rings of onion, and then broiled. If you toast your buttered frankfort rolls too (before putting on the franks), they'll taste just twice as good.

Hamburgers.

Hamburgers are done in a long-handled pan. Or even in the old-fashioned toaster suggested above—if the meat is lean. But if there is much fat the fry pan is the only safe method. Onions and mustard make the best seasoner for hamburgers, too. Either put on after cooking, or cooked right with them this way:

Mix ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper into 2 pounds ground round steak. Form this into 8 thin cakes. Cover 4 of these cakes with thinly-sliced onion. Put the remaining 4 cakes over, and spread the outside of all the cakes with prepared mustard. Put between the two parts of a wire broiler and broil 4 or 5 minutes on each side.

Kabobs.

Kabobs are another broiled picnic item that grow more popular each year. In their most simple form, these are just small pieces of steak or lamb (2 to 3 inches square, and about ½-inch thick) stuck on long skewers or sticks with squares of sliced bacon and ¼-inch slices on onion between. (Allow 3 or 4 pieces of steak to each skewer—about 2½ pounds of steak for four people.) Then just broil over live coals, turning the skewer or stick frequently till the food is done.

For more elaborate kabobs, wrap the slice of onion (not too large around) a strip of bacon. Or put on the stick alternate pieces of steak, bacon, onion, and thick quarters of firm tomato. Or wrap large olives in bacon and alternate with steak and onion. Or wrap a strip of bacon around a mushroom cap and alternate this with pieces of steak.

Plenty of potato salad with these kabobs. Or—if you have enough good hot ashes—bake your potatoes in them. Allow 40 to 60 minutes for medium-sized potatoes. Serve plenty of pickles. Or a tart vegetable salad such as this:

Cut 1 pound of string beans in 1-inch diagonal pieces and cook them. Drain them, pour over ½ cup French dressing, and chill 1 hour. Pour off excess dressing (if any). Then add ½ cup chopped canned pimento to 1 cup mustardy cooked dressing, and stir into beans. Good! And it will carry nicely in glass jars, too.

Displacement of Married Women Workers Regarded as Inroad on Feminine Rights

'Let George Do It' Is Held Slogan of Belgian Woman

Mme. May, Wife of the Ambassador, Says Their Women Leave High Professional Achievements to Energetic Americans.

Opportunity to become acquainted with prominent feminine personalities in the Nation's Capital—both in our National Government and visiting Diplomatic Corps—is afforded the women who listen to The Washington Post's "First Ladies of the Capital" broadcast interviews.

Twice weekly the Radio Reporter conducts a radio tete-a-tete with these celebrities on subjects of interest to women. They are broadcast coast to coast on an N. B. C. network over WRC on Mondays, and WMAL on Fridays.

By Margaret Santry,
The Radio Reporter.

BLAZING new trails in feminine achievement is no enviable enterprise to Belgian women. Taking on the heavy burdens of high responsibility in professional and public life is not the inspiration to European women that it is to American career women.

A clue to the Belgian woman's attitude toward the high-powered woman of soaring ambition was given by Mme. May, the gracious wife of the Ambassador of Belgium, Mr. Paul May, yesterday when she said:

"You American women may perhaps think we are hopelessly old-fashioned and unambitious, but many of us in Belgium still have the idea there is something in the adage 'the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world,' and we believe if we bring up our boys carefully and also train our husband's properly, they will 'do their bit' of the world's work as it should be done. As you would say in America we 'let George do it.'"

It was Mme. May's first address to American women and her first broadcast. She appeared in The Washington Post's "First Ladies of the Capital" interviews on a coast-to-coast National Broadcasting Co. network over WRC at noon. The charming Ambassadress was in mourning for Belgium's late King, Albert the First.

When we queried as to whether the American woman's achievements had the effect of inspiring women of other countries to similar achievement she demurred:

Mme. May: "We admire their achievements but our Belgian women do not envy them the heavy burden of the duties they have undertaken. We prefer as a general rule to devote ourselves to lines of endeavor to which our sex has been more accustomed through tradition, and to let our men do the other work."

Miss Santry: "What part do your women play in your National Government. Do you have any form of suffrage in Belgium?"

They Vote.

Mme. May: "Oh yes, since the end of the war the women of Belgium have been granted additional rights and privileges. Women of 21 now have the right to vote in the communal elections."

As to their privilege of holding public office:

Mme. May: "With the exceptions of certain war widows and mothers, who have extra voting privileges, women may not vote in the election of members to Parliament—although they are eligible for Parliament. We have one lady senator who has been in office for a number of years. Women may engage in the liberal professions, such as medicine or law, but they may not become magistrates. They are eligible as jurors, and have the privilege of declining to serve, one of the privileges men might well envy. Women in industry are amply protected by our laws governing hours and conditions of work."

There are few career women in Belgium although many new careers are open to the talents of women. Belgian women just don't believe in careers. Not that they are idle:

Mme. May: "Many have engaged in various industries, and there are at least 10,000 engaged in that most ancient of all Belgian industries, which is really an art, the making of fine lace.

Encourage Culture.

"Our women take a prominent part in the practice and encouragement of the arts and literature, in charitable and educational work, and in the promotion of social welfare. Many hundreds of our women are today devoting their lives to the work of educating and civilizing the natives in the Belgian Congo. And in all this work, both at home and across the seas, we have been inspired by the example and leadership of two women—our beloved Queen Elizabeth and her most gracious Majesty, Queen Astrid."

Miss Santry: "Although you were in this country when their majesties recently ascended the throne, have you known your new Queen before?"

Mme. May: "Oh yes, I knew her majesty as a young girl. My husband and I spent five years in Sweden when he was Minister to that country, and during that time we came to know the Queen's parents very intimately. She was gracious and charming as a young girl, and will always be loved by all the Belgians."

Listen next Friday to an interview with Mrs. Elizabeth Friedman, crypt-analyst for the U. S. Coast Guard, at 2 p. m., over WMAL.

Trowel Flower Show to Open At Club Today

Zeta Tau Alpha Officers for This Year Are Announced.

THE Trowel Club will hold its annual flower show from 4 to 6 o'clock today at the Community Club in Wesley Heights.

Heretofore the club has held the show at the home of one of the members, but due to the popular demand it is open to the public this year.

• • • •

Mrs. Guy Leadbetter, chairman of arrangements, will be assisted by Mrs. William J. Flather, Mrs. Arthur Heaton and Mrs. Victor Alfaro.

• • • •

The entries will be judged before the formal opening of the show and the winning displays will be labeled.

Mrs. John H. Small 3d is the president; Mrs. Theodore Joslin, vice president; Mrs. John A. Sterrett, secretary, and Mrs. Henry Curtis Morris, treasurer.

Zeta Tau Alpha Officers.

• • • •

Mrs. Warlick was also named as the fraternity's delegate to the Panhellenic Association of this city with Miss Beatrice A. Clephane as alternate. The advisory board to the student chapter at George Washington University includes Mrs. Laurie Hess, alumnae adviser; Mrs. Rene Reixach, pledge adviser, and Mrs. Ruth Warren.

The summer program of the chapter will include a luncheon in honor of the June graduates of Beta Alpha Chapter on June 9, and a joint picnic supper for active and alumnae members of the fraternity at the summer home of Mrs. W. Paul Briggs.

Dr. Leon Henderson, director of the research and planning division of the NRA and economic adviser to the administrator, will be the principal speaker at the current events talk at 4:50 o'clock this afternoon at the Women's City Club.

The associate members of the University of Michigan Alumnae Association of Washington will entertain all members at a card party at 8 o'clock tonight at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, 1634 I street northwest.

Mrs. Mark Foote, in charge of arrangements, will be assisted by Mrs. A. James Robertson and Mrs. Alfred T. Newbold.

The annual card party for the Catholic Home for Aged Ladies will be held at 8:15 o'clock tonight at the Playhouse, 1814 N street northwest.

Among the patrons are the Italian Ambassador, Augusto Rosso; Mgr. Edward L. Buckey, Senator David I. Walsh and Capt. Joseph P. McCrinck.

The patronesses include Mme. de Laboulaye, Mrs. Ellen Bayne, Mrs. Paul Bastedo, Miss May Blandford, Mrs. Moncure Burke, Mrs. Washington Lee Capps, Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Mrs. John Ryan Devereux and Mrs. Hugh Drum.

Hope Lodge, No. 7, of the Order of Shepherds of Bethlehem, will hold its meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the home of Mrs. Emma V. Delaney, 1415 V street southeast.

The National Capital Dahlia and Iris Society are sponsoring the annual iris show which will be held from 2 o'clock this afternoon to 10 o'clock tonight at the Carlton Hotel.

BELGIAN women are laissez faire about professional achievements in a man's world, says Mme. May, wife of the Belgian Ambassador. They still believe in the old adage about the "hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

Ralon's "Second Fiddle."

ARSENIO RALON, violinist from Guatemala, who is heard in artist programs as well as officiating as head of the excellent trio at the Madrillon, paused to chat.

Even artists can not resist telling about their children. In such matters they are as keen as "the Joneses" in telling of an offspring's exploits.

• • • •

"Victor Arsenio is 8 years old and he often plays the violin at school assemblies," said his father proudly. "He has marvelous poise, more than I, and it was demonstrated at his very first performance at school. I went expecting he would be nervous. Not so! When he had finished and some of the pupils did not clap, he glared at them!

• • • •

"Why did you name him Victor instead of making him a 'jr.?'" asked a friend.

"Well, I find in this country some people think Arsenio is hard to remember or to say, so I think maybe Victor will be easier."

"Does he really like to play and work hard at his practice?"

"Oh, yes! He likes to play very much, but one day after a long practice, he looked at me and shook his head sadly—

"'Do we have to be violinists in this world?' he said."

In True Virginia Style.

ONE OF the nicest garden parties of the year was held Sunday at the Fairfax home of Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, and his two sisters.

The day was so warm and the sun so definitely out on full-time schedule, that all was flowered chiffon and picture hats.

Down in the lovely garden which slopes away before a superb view, the Vice President and Mrs. Garner held informal court as honor guests at the party.

• • • •

It was nice to see "Miss Jenny" Moore, who has not been so well, apparently regaining her health. She was, as always, the gracious hostess and kept a keen eye on the refreshment tables where lusciously cooked hams, creamy chicken salad, piping hot biscuits and other delicious food was served in the generous style for which Virginia is famous. There also was a particularly inspired, and inspiring, punch.

Sauce for the Gander.

WHEN the King-Smith Studios put on their successful "Bus-Top" benefit Fair Saturday night, they served two kinds of dinner in the garden—German and Italian.

Everybody who chose the Italian dinner was raving about the sauce served on the spaghetti.

The concoctor of that wonderful sauce was quiet Frank Ashbrook, whose wife is Caroline McKinley, the vivacious dancer.

It seems that whenever the Ashbrooks are traveling abroad for Caroline to pick up new terpsichorean ideas, Husband Frank wanders about town and picks up choice recipes. The famous spaghetti sauce is only one of a remarkable collection.

This business of gathering trick-culinary ideas as a masculine hobby has more than one distinguished follower. Alfred Lunt of the famous dramatic team of Lunt-Fontanne does the same thing.

Swap Countries.

HON. JOHN FRANCIS AMHERST CECIL and his recently divorced wife, the former Cornelia Vanderbilt, apparently have agreed to swap countries. Lord Cecil is on the high seas en route to palatial Biltmore House, just outside of Asheville, N. C.

Cornelia Vanderbilt, since securing her Parisian decree, has indicated that she will live in England.

The two attractive little boys evidently are scheduled for a lot of Atlantic crossing for they are to spend six months each year with either parent. Both youngsters are on their way to this country, accompanying their father.

THIS BACK-TO-THE-HOME trend for women is "a remnant of moth-eaten customs," according to Miss Elsie Hill, above. Member of the National Woman's Party, she's for abolishing all discrimination against women as such.

City Women Read Fiction But Rurally It's Economics

History, Biography and Travel Are Also Country Favorites; Women Read So Voraciously Libraries Can't Keep Them Supplied.

WHILE city women are "escaping" the problems of today by reading fiction, their country cousins are concentrating on the latest books on economics and the social sciences.

This information comes from Miss Julia Merrill, head of the public library division of the American Liberary Association. Miss Merrill, who is at the Shoreham attending the adult education conference, yesterday spoke enthusiastically of the work being done by rural libraries in adult education.

"I can not say all country women read better books than city women," Miss Merrill said. "We can not divide people into groups. They must be considered as individuals. But I think on the average the country woman is less influenced by book advertising. She has also more leisure to read as there are fewer distractions in the country.

Can't Keep Them Supplied.

"History, biography, and travel books are favorites of women in the country. And they read so many books that small libraries can not keep them supplied. Many larger cities now extend their library facilities to the entire county. Such cities have small branch libraries and rotate the books from time to time. Many of these libraries have reading courses, and the librarian acts as an adviser to the readers. The county librarian soon learns the tastes of the patrons, and sends out books each person will like."

One of the most significant developments in library work, according to Miss Merrill, is the reading course provided by the Oregon State Library.

"More than 1,500 students are taking these reading courses," she said, "and most of these students are farm people. There is no charge for the courses. A student may write the library as to what kind of a course he wants and it will be mapped out for him. We look forward to the time when all States will offer such courses."

Interest in rural libraries is constantly increasing, and the patrons are demanding the best, Miss Merrill says.

"Eleven counties in different States in the South have libraries started by the Julius Rosenwald fund," she said. "These libraries were to be taken over by the county later. When the counties started to discontinue them, the citizens rose in rebellion. They said they paid money to keep up the courthouses and prisons, which they didn't want, and they did want the libraries and would have them. In Louisiana, the chairman of the State library commission recently asked for $3,000,000 to finance rural libraries. It looks like he will get it."

All American people are reading much more than they did before the depression, Miss Merrill says.

Furniture Show Provokes Some Verbal Battles

STANDPATTERS and progressives stood side by side at the style show of modern bedrooms at the Willard yesterday. The resultant warfare made the battle between the fundamentalists and the evolutionists look like a Quaker meeting.

"Oh, how bright and cheerful" exclaimed an enthusiastic young modern—as she gazed ecstatically at a nursery decorated in oyster white relieved with splashes of bright red. "Wouldn't a child love that? He never would be bored or sad."

"Huh," snorted a middle-aged woman next to her. "He certainly wouldn't! He would have St. Vitus dance in no time."

"But," persisted the young modern, "Don't you think the simplicity of these rooms is beautiful? So much better than the old ornate rooms? Look at the simple lines. The absence of frills and furbelows. Don't you think it practical and restful?"

Bad Taste!

"Frills and furbelows nothing!" retorted the older woman. "Some people always have had bad taste and always will. The good old furniture was never ornate. There has always been good furniture and bad furniture, you must have the ability to choose.

"You young brides will buy this stuff and pay a lot of money for it, and in a few years, you will find you have nothing. You should study furniture. Now look at those white handles on that brown furniture. They destroy the unity as piece of furniture should possess. I'll guarantee if you sat in one of those rooms an hour you wouldn't buy one. They would drive you crazy."

"Don't you think this green and white room somewhat restful?" ventured the young woman somewhat timidly.

"No Charm."

"Certainly it would be fine for a guest room—provided you didn't want the guest to stay long."

"Undoubtedly," the modern enthusiast came back, "this furniture is more healthy. It is metal and can be washed. The beds are easy to make up, and save work. There is beauty and economy in these straight lines. I love these rooms."

"Beauty but no charm." The older woman walked away.

The young woman turned to one of her contemporaries and smiled with tolerance for the eccentricities of old age.

"I think I will have the master bedroom in my house done over in modernistic furniture," she said.

French Congregation Will Hold a Soiree

Presbyterians Will Hear Mrs. Gibbons.

The French congregation, which meets at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church will hold a dinner and soiree in the parish house of the church tonight. Mrs. Helen Davenport Gibbons, of Princeton, N. J., and E. Claude Babcock will be the principal speakers.

Mrs. Gibbons is widely known as author, lecturer and traveler, and is the wife of Herbert Adams Gibbons. She will tell of her impressions of the French people as she knows them from intimate association. Mr. Babcock, who is president of the American Federation of Government Employes, spent some time in France during and after the war. Both he and Mrs. Gibbons will speak in French.

Other features of the program will be the telling of stories by the Rev. Andre Frank Liotard, pastor of the French congregation, and the singing of French songs by the company. The dinner, which is in the charge of Mrs. Mary C. D. Johnson, will be at 6:30 o'clock.

Woman's Party Views Movement As Indicative of Worse to Come

One of Their Stanchest Members Considers It a Sinister Sign That America Will Follow European Countries in Sending Women Back to Their Kitchens.

Cries against working wives have crystallized into the Nation-wide slogan, "Discharge married women first." Is this a step toward solution of the unemployment problem? Should married women relinquish their jobs and return home? This is the second in a series of articles presenting both sides of these widely discussed questions.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

CLAMORS against the wage-earning wife have boomed in from all sides.

Equally as spirited and trumpet-tongued have been the shouts of individuals and organizations rallying to her defense.

The National Woman's Party, particularly, regards the measure to displace married women workers as an inroad on feminine rights. Its leaders see in it a sinister move to bundle women throughout the world back to the kitchen.

Old cave-man prejudices carried into modern life are responsible for the discriminations against married women workers, thinks Miss Elsie Hill, prominent member of the organization.

"It goes back," she asserted, "to the ancient tradition that a husband is bound to support his wife. This in turn reverts to the days when wives became the property of their husbands. Those who say they don't believe in women working, because man is the natural provider of the home than the proposal to bar married women from paid work.

Men Wouldn't Like It.

"The real question, then, is not so much the right of the married woman to work but the right of the working woman to marry.

"Besides, if all women returned to the home, the very men crying now for women's jobs would have a real problem on their hands. Imagine what ridiculous situations would result if every woman was dependent on her nearest male relative for support. Who would get tired of that more quickly—the men who furnished the support or the women who received it?"

Miss Alice Paul, famous feminist and a founder of the National Woman's Party, believes women themselves are unconsciously responsible for the international back-to-the-home movement.

"Women, both those married and those unmarried, deserve to be pushed back because they haven't done anything to earn their rights," she said. "Modern measures to remove married women workers constitute the beginning of a movement to take all women out of public life. In foreign countries such action struck at wives first and then gradually enlarged to affect all women.

Europe Discouraging Women.

"In Geneva every newspaper woman, for instance, has lost her job. In Amsterdam the same situation is existent. In Germany and in Italy the term 'woman' is coming to connote only potential motherhood. Yet at one time in the German Reichstag there were more women, proportionately, than in any other Parliament in the world.

"But while the movement in Italy and in Germany has been thoroughly advertised, perhaps fewer people know that even in England married women are being released from their jobs. Every country in Europe, except Russia, is endeavoring to push woman back into the four walls of the home.

(Read in tomorrow's Post of the controversy between the merit system and the marital status system in Government employment.)

are unconsciously influenced by the antiquated British common law.

"Two classes of persons advocate the loudest that the married woman should give up her job. One is composed of men who feel their jobs are usurped by women who should depend on husbands for support. The other group is made up of single women who fail to recognize this step is toward the eventual displacement of all women, a gesture in the direction of sending us all back to the home."

Miss Hill cited numerous business organizations that had attempted to relieve unemployment by discharging married women. She pointed out the "married person's clause" of the economy act had given impetus to this Nation-wide movement.

"At first glance this attempt might seem justifiable," she asserted. "Yet a careful analysis will reveal it is nothing more than a creeping to the foreground of an old theory that woman must disregard her individuality in favor of the good of the race. If every married woman in the world, however, went back to the hearthside, the race would actually suffer.

"All this discussion of woman's place being in the home is merely an excuse for taking away woman's right as an individual. Nothing, in fact, is more at odds with the good

Shorts Fad a Style Problem; They're Too Much of a Craze

NEW YORK, May 21 (U.P.).—Fashion experts in New York and other urban centers of America have suddenly become deeply concerned over vast increase in popularity achieved by shorts for sports.

This condition was uncovered in a survey which began, innocently enough, to find out just how popular shorts are going to be among women and girls inclined to spend their summers at tennis, golf, riding bicycles or flinging themselves in the face of incoming waves.

Two years ago, or at least three, the idea of girls attiring themselves in the same uniform ordinarily worn by a discus-thrower would have brought intense denunciation. But this summer just such a costume is often to be seen on the street, especially in the smaller Long Island communities.

Stylists and fashion writers alike feel shorts are highly suitable for tennis court, beach and golf course. They feel, however, excessive use of short pants among ladies will tend to kill off the fashion.

Spectacle of a girl playing tennis in shorts, one stylist pointed out today, already has become established as right and proper. But if women start showing up at the race tracks, or begin parading about residential districts with a major portion of their legs exposed, the idea will not be so edifying.

Actual presence of the legs themselves militates against the fad, according to two different department store buyers questioned today.

"The girl with beautiful legs, or even just plain, attractive legs," said one, "might be entitled to make public appearances in shorts. But a great many girls and women have unattractive legs. They may be bowed, they may be knobby, or they may be fat. And you'll find these women are buying and wearing shorts just as quickly as are the ones with beautiful legs."

Orchid Swank Hits New High; One for $450

Take Heart, Young Men—Florist Shops Don't Carry It.

ORCHIDS have always been the most luxurious and expensive of flowers, but a new high in snootiness has now been reached by the Canhamiana Alba, a newcomer in the orchid tribe. This flower, which costs as much as an automobile, was described yesterday by Dr. David Lumsden, horticulturist with the United States Department of Agriculture and secretary of the American Orchid society.

Although he has one of the most extensive private collections of orchids in the United States, Dr. Lumsden does not yet have the rare and extremely high-priced Canhamiana Alba, the white form of the Canhamiana. Neither do florist shops have it for sale.

"Each of the Canhamiana Alba plants costs from $100 to $450," said Dr. Lumsden, who has the ordinary Camhamiana in his collection. This flower is a hybrid with the generic name of laeliocattleya and was introduced to the world about 1920 by a London horticulturist named Canham; hence the name Canhamiana. It has a deep lavender bloom with amethyst lips.

Little Difficulty.

Dr. Lumsden experienced only a small amount of difficulty in growing the ordinary Canhamiana, although he is probably the only person in Washington who has ever attempted to raise this orchid.

"The Canhamiana is just appearing in florist shops," explained the horticulturist. "Small plants sell for about $25. The blooms can be bought for as little as $5 or $7.50 apiece. I expect the plant in my collection to have its annual bloom in September."

Dr. Lumsden has had his Canhamiana seven years. Another grower of this exotic flower tended his delicate plant with unceasing care for 11 years without getting results. He was an employe of a privately owned nursery and began his efforts to grow this particular kind of orchid in 1920, shortly after it was first developed by the English horticulturist. When 11 years had passed without a sign of a bloom on the full-sized plants, the nursery owner ordered them to be destroyed.

In The Twelfth Year!

The employe refused to give up hope. He begged for one more year and was granted it. In the twlfth year, Canhamiana burst into queenly bloom.

"It takes patience and infinite care to grow any orchid," said Dr. Lumsden. "The seeds are put in test tubes or flasks and the method used is the same as that used in laboratories when blood cultures are taken. The seeds are fed a few grains of sugar, a little nitrogen, a little phosphoric acid, and a bit of potash. Finally, the plants begin to grow and eventually the blooms come."

The blooms may come for Dr. Lumsden, but after hearing the horticulturist's formula for obtaining them, most ordinary flower growers will probably be content to stick to sweetpeas and tulips. However there is that alluring price of $450 for a good Canhamiana Alba plant, which is certainly something to strive for.

Families Now Eat for Little

Professor Computes Five Can Be Nourished for $9.45 a Week.

NEW YORK, May 21 (U.P.).—A family of five—mother, father and three children, aged 15, 9 and 5 years, respectively—can eat nourishing food at a cost of $9.45 a week, according to Dr. Grace MacLeod, professor of nutrition at Columbia University. She prepared a menu of 12,300 calories a day, assisted by students.

A typical day's menu included:

Breakfast: Cereal with bananas, milk and sugar; toast and butter; glass of milk for each child; coffee for adults with top milk and sugar.

Luncheon: Macaroni and cheese; stewed tomatoes; bread and butter; glass of milk for each.

Dinner: Liver loaf; potatoes; cabbage and carrot salad; gingerbread with whipped evaporated milk; glass of milk for each child, coffee for adults.

"The menu is wholesome and adequate," Dr. MacLeod said. "It provides protein, calcium phosphorus, iron and vitamins in necessary amounts. In computing the cost, we deliberately chose foods that were of average cost rather than shopping for the lowest prices we could find. With a little care the cost per day could be reduced."

Two other menus were drawn up, one for a man at 49 cents a day and one for a woman at 44 cents a day. They provided 3,000 calories and 2,400 calories, respectively. These menus, Dr. McLeod explained, were particularly valuable for students who could not afford more than 50 cents a day for food. The 44-cent menu for women follows:

Breakfast (in room): 1 pint of milk, 1 shredded wheat biscuit, 1 banana, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon of cod liver oil.

Luncheon in cafeteria: Vegetable chowder, whole-wheat raisin bread and butter, stuffed egg and watercress salad, glass of milk.

Supper (in room): 1 pint of milk flavored with chocolate syrup, one-fourth loaf of whole-wheat bread, 1 orange.

Radio Waves and Ripples

RONALD DAWSON, the Capital's most persistent producer of radio plays, is through with acting.

A nervous collapse suffered last week is responsible for the decision announced yesterday. Rehearsals at night for his weekly WOL show and business all day, little sleep, irregular meals and no relaxation have taken their toll. Henceforth Dawson will stay on the sidelines, leaving the acting to the members of his company.

It was a similar breakdown several years ago after 18 months of playing Stanhope in "Journey's End" with a road company that brought Dawson to radio.

WE know it's not like us to feel this way, that it's against all natural instincts—home, country, &—but we can't help it. Max Baer is studying to be a crooner. We hate crooners. So we want very much to see Primo Carnera flip that uppercut to Mr. Baer's jaw not later than the third round of their fight next month. And we fervently hope Mr. Carnera doesn't know his own strength.

We know that's not very patriotic of us, but the way we feel about crooners far transcends in sheer force and overwhelming power all other emotions.

On second thought, posibly it would be better if Mr. Baer won. Perhaps that would encourage him to go right on being a boxer.

But we still think Mr. Carnera's uppercut would stand a better chance of doing something to save the world from crooners. We hope Mr. Carnera hates crooners, too.

We are to learn this summer how it feels to be a deep-sea diver, if N. B. C.'s tests with a microphone installed inside of Capt. Charles B. Scully's life-savings mask mean anything.

N. B. C.'s engineers said it was nothing at all for them to talk to Capt. Scully and for the captain to talk back from the bottom of the Park Central Hotel Pool, though it was necessary to hang the microphone on the bridge of his nose.

Walter Huston will sing.

Edward Johnson, Metropolitan tenor, also will sing.

And Jack Pearl, Groucho and Chico Marx and Phil Baker will be funny.

These are some of the people you will hear and some of the ways in which you will hear them on N. B. C. tomorrow from 11 p. m. to midnight. They will come as part of the Actors' Dinner Club benefit revue.

Two ladies of Georgetown turn broadcasters today to help along the Georgetown Garden Pilgrimage tomorrow. Mrs. Alice Coyle Torbet has five minutes on WRC, beginning at 4:45 p. m., and Mrs. Dorsay Hyde comes to a WJSV microphone at 10:20 p. m.

Getting Personal.

Richard Himber, one of radio's busiest bandmen with spots on both major networks, left a music conservatory in Newark because he wanted to play popular stuff, disliked the classics . . . the other day the conservatory asked him to come back and address one of its classes . . . he did, giving them a very nice talk on how much good his classical training did him . . . instead of throwing away his program scripts after a broadcast, Babe Ruth signs them, passes them out to his kid fans . . . no one knows exactly, but the guess is that the Babe has supplied his autograph not less than 2,000,000 times . . . both Columbia and N. B. C. have gone in for Hollywood broadcasts . . . the movie-radio tie-up is a natural . . . James Melton has signed to continue with the Family Theater of the Air on C. B. S. in addition to his Beauty Box Theater broadcasting . . . and in his spare time he probably will pinch hit for Lanny Ross on N. B. C.'s Show Boat.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Russia, the old and the new, Maj. Gen. Victor Yakhontoff, Women's Radio Review, 2:30 p. m.; "Puritan Lullaby," operetta from the British Broadcasting Corporation in London, 3:15 p. m.; "The Chocolate Soldier" from the Beauty Box Theater, 9 p. m.

WMAL — Dixie Harmonies, 8:15 p. m.; Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, addresses the annual dinner of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, 9:30 p. m.; Rudy Vallee's Orchestra, 10:15 p. m.

WJSV—Vivienne Segal joins Abe Lyman's "Accordiana," 7:30 p. m.; Eugene Ormandy leads the Minneapolis Symphony in a program of light classics, 8:30 p. m.; George M. Cohan, Irving Berlin, Billy Hill, Jean Schwartz and others play their own favorite tunes, 11 a. m.

Evelyn Davis Dancers Give Program Tonight

Under auspices of the Community Center Department, the Evelyn Davis dance group will present a program this evening in Roosevelt High School auditorium. Included among the new dances will be "Maidens and Wives," with music specially composed by Martha Stevens, who will accompany this number; a Gavotte and a Minuet written for the group by Thomas Simmons, of New York; and "Design for a Woodcut" by Alice Finckel, who is the official accompanist.

"Morning Song," composed by John Alden Finckel for the recent cherry blossom festival, will be repeated by the dancers. Repetitions from last year's program will be "Four Exaggerations" and "Marching to Glory," the latter accompanied by the Roosevelt Glee Club. The juniors of the group will be seen in four short numbers: "The Little Faun" (music by Pierne), "The Princess' Box" (music by MacDowell), "The Rag Dolls and Jack-in-the-Box" and "Waltz Rhythms."

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Hound Dog Finds His Brother.

Some of you wise folks have already wanted to know why Hee-Haw wasn't so glad to hear his old master, Mr. Man, talking to Uncle Joe that he would yell right out and tell him that he was there under the bridge. Well, the truth is that Hee-Haw wasn't so awfully anxious to go back to Mr. Man. When he was at Mr. Man's house he had to haul wood or plow or do some other sort of hard work most every day, and he didn't ever get enough to eat.

Since he had been with Blackie he had had plenty to eat, a good bed to sleep in nights, little work to do, and lots of play. And then he could sit around and hear Blackie and his friends tell stories, and could have a lot of good times that he couldn't have with Mr. Man. So that tells you what you wanted to know. Now let's hurry along to Blackie's house.

It was good dark when they got to the Big Tree, and the stars were just coming out good. Now the first thing to do was to find out something about that dog over at Uncle Joe's house. Jay Bird knew the way, but he can't see much at night, so Blackie told him to ride on Hound Dog's back over to Uncle Joe's house. And he told Hound Dog that if Uncle Joe's dog didn't happen to be his brother, to stay with him, anyway, till he had made friends with him. Jay Bird was to come back and tell Blackie all about how the plans were working. So after getting a quick lunch, Jay Bird and Hound Dog started off for Uncle Joe's house, while Blackie and the rest of the Creek Folks set about cooking a real supper for themselves.

When Jay Bird and Hound Dog got near Uncle Joe's house, they heard the most terrible howling that a dog ever did, and I know you could have heard it a mile. That awfully loud howl was what made Uncle Joe name his dog Howler. Jay Bird knew his name, and had told Hound Dog. Hound Dog was a mighty big dog, and had had some mighty hard fights, and he wasn't afraid of any dog in the world; so he trotted right on up to the gate where the other big dog was howling so, and said: "Howdy, Howler: What are you making so much noise about when just your brother is coming to see you?"

Howler was so surprised to hear a stranger call him by name, that way, that he stopped howling, and just stood there with his tongue hanging out. He couldn't at all understand how a stranger should come up to his gate and speak to him that way. But it must be a friend, to be calling him brother, and so he didn't howl any more, but just stood there and looked at Hound Dog. Then Hound Dog asked: "Where's your ma, Howler?"

"I haven't any ma, so far as I know. I heard Uncle Joe say that I did have a ma one time that lived away up in the mountain country, and died when I was a little puppy, but I don't remember anything about her. I have been right here with Uncle Joe ever since I can remember. He said I had a big brother somewhere, but I never have seen him."

Wasn't that enough to "make a dog laugh," as folks say? Well, it did make Hound Dog laugh.

"CHEVROLET IS RIGHT!"

After driving the New Chevrolet five miles, I'd never buy any other low-priced car!"

CHEVROLET

"I TRIED A MILE THROUGH CITY TRAFFIC—pick-up marvelous—so was the steering and the brakes!"

"ANOTHER MILE ON A BROAD OPEN HIGHWAY . . . 80 miles per hour—no swaying—no vibration!"

"A HARD MILE ON A TREACHEROUS, MUDDY ROAD . . . Knee-Action held me steady, safe."

"I CLIMBED A LONG STEEP MOUNTAIN GRADE—that Blue-Flame engine pulled me over easily in high!"

"I FINISHED THE FIVE MILES ON BUMPY PAVEMENT—relaxed, thanks to Knee-Action and the big Fisher body!"

IN THE low-price motor car field there's nothing that even compares with Chevrolet's famous 5-mile ride. Nothing else so smooth or quiet. Nothing so steady and safe. Nothing so easy and restful. The reason is: No other car at Chevrolet's price has any of the vital features pictured below—not a single one. And without these features, it's impossible to equal Chevrolet's ride! You simply can't get Knee-Action results with anything less than a genuine Knee-Action car. You can't get Fisher Body comfort and safety with less than a Fisher body. You can't get six-cylinder economy with more than six—nor can you get valve-in-head performance with anything inferior to valve-in-head design. And the same thing applies to the brakes and the steering. Chevrolet offers one feature after another that makes a tremendous difference—in the way the car feels, performs and saves. One feature after another that puts Chevrolet far ahead in value . . . farther ahead every day in sales!

Labor Scores Differential In NRA Pay

Membership Growth Is Shown in Report of President.

Roanoke, Va., May 21 (AP).—J. D. Rapp, of Clifton Forge, retiring vice president; was nominated for president of the Virginia Federation of Labor by a caucus tonight at the thirty-ninth annual convention.

Joseph Rossano, of Portsmouth, was nominated for vice president, and E. J. Shave, of Hampton, for re-election as secretary-treasurer. The election will take place tomorrow.

Those prominently mentioned for nomination as executive board members were H. C. Phillips, Alexandria; J. E. Mustain, Danville; Mrs. M. M. Walker, Lynchburg; O. C. Moore, of Norfolk; John A. Titmus, Petersburg; Charles J. Hughes, Richmond, the retiring president; W. B. Johnson, Roanoke.

Notes Membership Rise.

Mr. Hughes, who is retiring after two terms as president, reported an encouraging increase in federation membership. He said 50 new unions with a membership of 20,000 had been organized during the year.

Hughes was sharply critical of the wage differential in favor of Southern employes as against Northern employes in the NRA setup.

"There is only one actual basis for this differential," he said. "That is the greed and avidity of Southern employers. Southern workers are as intelligent and as proficient as Northern workers. Southern employers who insist on continuing the wage differential are thereby confessing their own deficiency."

ERA Wage Scales Hit.

Resolution condemning what was described as "modification" of wage scales under Federal relief work in Virginia were drawn up last night by the executive board and presented to the Federation this morning.

Other resolutions prepared by the board in its meeting preliminary to the two-day convention called upon federation members to buy goods bearing union labels, and pledged the members to support President Roosevelt.

The resolutions dealing with wage scales charged that relief authorities in Virginia "have modified the wage scales established by the Washington authorities without any justifiable reason."

Admiral Bayly To Be Honored

Briton to Attend Rites at Annapolis in Tribute to Pringle.

Annapolis, Md., May 21 (Spl.).—Full military honors will be accorded Admiral Sir Lewis Bayly, British navy, when he visits the Naval Academy Wednesday for the unveiling of a bronze plaque in memory of Vice Admiral Joel R. P. Pringle, U. S. Navy.

The reception will take place in front of the Administration Building, where the Marine Guard and the Academy Band will parade. The band will play the British National Anthem after which a 17-gun salute will be fired from the shore battery. Following the unveiling ceremony Admiral Bayly will be luncheon guest of Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent of the Academy.

The plaque has been placed in the memorial room of Bancroft Hall and its acceptance in behalf of the Navy will be by Admiral William H. Standley, Chief of Operations.

Red Cross to Place First Aid Stations on Valley Highway

Filling Stations and Tourist Homes Will Be Utilized.

Winchester, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—The American Red Cross, through the Winchester and Frederick County Chapter, this week will begin establishment of eight highway first aid stations in an experiment to determine the feasibility of such stations on the principal roads.

The stations are being started by a committee of the local chapter.

Eight stations are to be located, four north of Winchester on United States Route 11 towards Martinsburg and 4 south on the same highway towards Harrisonburg. Tourist homes or filling stations will be selected for the first aid stations. They will be required to have 24-hour telephone service and must be equipped with a first aid kit. Three markers, one at the first aid station and one-half mile on each side, will be erected.

Taylor Barr, Capt. J. T. Boyd, Miss Eleanora Clevenger, Mrs. Lottie M. Wolfe and Mrs. Bertha Hicks comprise the first aid committee. Mr. Barr will select the places to be designated first aid stations. He also will train personnel for stations north of Winchester, while Mrs. Wolfe will train those south of Winchester.

Farm Credit Officers, Local Aids Confer

Representatives From 29 Counties Hear Talks at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—More than 50 persons from 29 counties of Virginia and Maryland convened here today in the first of a series of meetings in this section between officials of the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore and local farm loan officials.

C. H. Jackson, president of the Baltimore bank, outlined the activities of this branch of the Farm Credit Administration, pointing out the benefits it hopes to develop for farmers.

H. S. Wynn, treasurer, read a paper explaining the duties of secretary-treasurers of all the local county units of the farm loan organization. Secretaries' duties were explained by E. P. Crider, district bank secretary. D. G. Harry, of Baltimore, and Thomas W. Ozlin, of Richmond, made short addresses.

Irvin P. Whitehead, general counsel of the bank, spoke on the legal aspects of this phase of the New Deal, and pointed out means by which farmers of this section can take particular benefit from this Government agency.

An open forum discussion among the secretary-treasurers was presided over by Mr. Jackson in the afternoon, and officials answered queries concerning manipulation of the financial agency from the local standpoint.

Officials of the Baltimore bank present, in addition to those who spoke, were H. S. Respess, general counsel; E. W. Ligon, vice chairman of the credit committee, and A. N. Hodgson, appraiser.

Two Counties to Have Only 1 Trial Justice

Heathsville, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Northumberland and Lancaster Counties will combine to have only one trial justice for the two counties, rather than one for each county, it was decided at a meeting of the Boards of Supervisors of the two counties here.

The trial justice will take office July 1 and will replace the justices of the peace and the juvenile judge in the two counties. Judge E. Hugh Smith of the Northumberland and Lancaster Circuit Courts will appoint the new officer.

Peery Denies Plan to Call Extra Session

Conditions Demanding Step Have Not Arisen He Asserts.

Richmond, May 21 (Spl.).—Gov. Peery said today that he had no idea of calling the General Assembly into special session.

"I don't mean to say that I will not call the General Assembly into extraordinary session when conditions demand, but such conditions have not yet arisen," he said, concerning his attitude on the matter.

The Governor also recalled the fact that the right to call the Legislature into extra session does not rest solely upon self. The constitution prescribes that such a session must be called on application of two-thirds of the members of both branches of the General Assembly.

Dairy Co-Op Started in '22 Doubles Trade

Valley Associtaion Has Proved of Value to Farmers.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 21 (Spl.). That cooperation plus quality pays, and pays the cooperating farmers well, is demonstrated by the 12 years of progress that the Valley of Virginia Cooperative Milk Producers Association, Inc., is just completing, its leaders declare.

This cooperative was organized in May, 1922, with approximately 450 members. During the first year of operation, the association marketed 7,690,450 pounds of milk for the members. At the present time membership numbers approximately 900 and the volume of milk delivered during the current year will be approximately 13,800,000 pounds.

This remarkable record of progress is the result of the loyal cooperation of the members in supporting their association. During 1922-1924 the association shipped most of its milk to Norfolk, where it was distributed to consumers of fluid milk in bottled form. The management then learned that the production of milk was increasing in the Norfolk area so that there would soon be no outlet there for valley milk. The manager therefore set out to develop outlets among ice cream manufacturers to absorb the production of the members. In contacting the trade he learned that Rockingham County was notorious for garlic in the milk and cream, and buyers were sceptical of the quality of the milk offered by the cooperative. The directors then decided that the association must build up a reputation for dependable high quality milk products.

Grading Policy Adopted.

Late in 1924, in order to foster improvement in the quality of the milk delivered to the cooperative plant by the members, the policy was adopted of grading all milk received and paying 25 cents per 100 pounds more for first grade milk. As a result of this grading program, it was not long before approximately 60 per cent of the milk received was first grade. At the present time approximately 70 per cent of the milk handled by the cooperative is first grade, with an additional 6 per cent grade A milk being sold to the consumers of Harrisonburg for fluid consumption.

The quality improvement has resulted in the Valley of Virginia Cooperative Milk Producers Association being known throughout the ice cream trade as the synonym of quality.

The volume of milk supplied the cooperative plant increased slowly until 1927. At that time the directors and manager saw, from a comparison of the cost of handling 100 pounds of milk through the plant in spring, when the volume is large, with the cost of handling in the winter, when the volume is small, that the association could return the members substantially higher prices if there was a materially larger volume of milk going through the plant.

They engaged a field man to carry on educational work among the members regarding the activities of the association, help the members improve the quality of their milk, and interest additional producers in becoming members of the cooperative. In two years' time the membership was built up from 600 to 800. At the same time the volume was expanded approximately 50 per cent, from 8,500,000 pounds to 13,250,000 pounds per year. Even after paying the salary and travel expenses of the field man, the handling cost was reduced 15 cents per 100 pounds.

Leased First Plant.

When the Valley of Virginia Association was organized in the spring of 1922 there were two milk plants operating in Harrisonburg. Instead of building another and competing for markets, the new co-op made a deal to lease the larger plant with an option to buy it, at the same time buying the equipment. Since the members were short of cash following the drastic price drop in 1921-22, they gave notes at the rate of $5 per cow to their association as collateral for a loan.

The bank, however, refused to accept these notes as collateral, so the directors had to personally indorse the note for a loan of $10,000 as a payment on the equipment and provide operating capital. The members in the marketing agreement with their association authorized the deduction of 10 per cent of their milk checks to pay for the plant and equipment. They are given certificates of indebtedness to show their equity in the business.

22% Allotted To Creditors Of Shut Bank

Reorganization Backers Ask Dissenters Get Only 12¾%.

Frederick, Md., May 21 (Spl.).—Creditors of the closed Central Trust Co. will receive 22 per cent of their claims soon through distribution of the assets of the closed bank and its 11 branches in Frederick, Carroll, Howard and Washington Counties, according to the report of H. E. Meeks, chief examiner of the State bank commissioner, filed in the Circuit Court today.

The distribution is based on claims of $10,729,483.29 and assets of $2,383,602.26.

The appraisal of assets has been in process since March 3, when the Circuit Court approved the plan of reorganization of the trust company.

On filing of the report today, Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard signed an order that the receivership of the Central Trust Co. be terminated, under the plan of reorganization. Announcement of a date for establishment of the Western Maryland Trust Co. and four independent State banks, important adjunct of the Central Trust receivership, is hoped for within two weeks, backers of the plan stated.

Immediately after filing of the report, backers of the reorganization plan filed exceptions to the 22 per cent valuation insofar as it affects the 166 depositors and creditors who dissented to the reorganization plan.

They asked that the dissenters be allowed a value of 12¾ per cent of their interests.

This is due, say the persons filing the exceptions, to the fact that the assets are appraised as of ultimate values, but that since 80 per cent of them consist of notes, secured by real estate which could not bring its face value at forced sale, the immediate value is much less than the ultimate value. In a special section stock assessment, Mr. Meeks reports that of the $1,500,000 stock assessments due, $229,579.34 has been collected. Of the balance of $1,270,420.66 the report estimates that approximately $80,000 can be collected.

Replicas of Guns Brought by Calvert in Ark To Guard St. Mary's Memorial State House

Two counterparts of the 300-year-old St. Marys City cannon (below) which are attracting attention on the grounds of Georgetown University, where they guard the entrance to administration buildings. They were found along with the St. Marys City cannon in 1824, embedded in the banks of St. Marys River, and were preserved by Jesuit fathers of St. Inigoes until presented to the college in 1885.

Workmen on the memorial State House of 1676, being erected by the Maryland Tercentenary Commission at St. Marys City, Md., measure the 300-year-old cannon, donated by the Jesuit Order of St. Inigoes, Md., for mounting at the entrance to the State House.

Supplemental Report Laid To Thompson

Mann Says Darrow Not to Blame; Will Stand "Mental Test."

It was William O. Thompson, and not Clarence Darrow, who insisted upon submission of the socialistic recommendations in the supplemental report released with that of the Darrow Board, according to the United Press.

Darrow, fearing the socialistic proposal would precipitate such violent debate as to overshadow the committee's criticism of code operation, was quoted by friends as saying, "I wish I could drop this supplementary thing."

Fred P. Mann, sr., of Devil's Lake, N. Dak., a member of the board, said he and his colleagues, Samuel C. Henry and W. W. Neal, who were unable to sign the supplemental report, did not criticize Darrow for his part in it.

"We believe Darrow has the best brains in the outfit," Mann said. "We are perfectly willing to submit to a test of board members' sanity and ability as proposed by NRA, provided NRA administrators submit to the same test from Gen. Johnson down."

Amherst Woman Buried.

Amherst, Va., May 21 (Spl.). Burial of Mrs. Roberta Blanche Stinnette, 76, who died Saturday in Newport News, took place this afternoon here. She was a native of Amherst County. Mrs. Stinnette is survived by six sons and three daughters.

Two of Original Weapons Located on Campus of Georgetown.

By Marion Butler.

Four 300-year-old cannon, reminiscent of the days when the Nation's Capital and the first capital of Maryland were only Indian hunting grounds, are focusing tourist attention today in spots 100 miles apart.

In Washington, for 34 years, two of these guns have guarded the entrance to the gray stone precincts of Georgetown University. Unknown to many until touched this year by the spotlight of the Maryland tercentenary celebration, the cannon have been the property of the university since 1885, and were mounted by Col. George C. Reid, U. S. M. C., in 1900.

This week at St. Marys City, Md., site of Maryland's first settlement and capital, work has started on the mounting of two counterparts of these guns. These will guard the entrance to the tercentenary memorial State House of 1676, which is being finished for its dedication date June 15 at tercentenary exercises and pageant to be presented before the Governors of the Eastern States, National notables and 50,000 visitors. The guns are the gift of priests of the Society of Jesus, at St. Inigoes, Md.

Brought to this country in 1634 aboard the Ark, flagship of Leonard Calvert and his band of first Maryland colonists, the four guns were among several to stand guard in the palisade fort erected by the settlers on the bluff above St. Marys River. Discovered nearly two centuries later imbedded in the mud along the river shores, they were raised in 1824. Jesuit fathers of historic St. Inigoe's Mission preserved them for posterity, deeding two to Georgetown University, and preserving two in their three-century-old grounds.

Richmond, May 21 (AP).—Jefferson Davis' own ordnance manual has come back to Richmond after an absence of nearly 69 years.

Col. LeRoy Hodges, Virginia ordnance officer, preparing his "ordnance notes," recently asked Maj. L. A. Codd, editor of Army Ordnance, to secure for him from the War Department the loan of ordnance manuals of the Civil War period.

The loan was authorized and, when the manuals came, "The Ordnance Manual for Use of the Officers of the Confederate States Army," first edition, prepared under the direction of Col. J. Gorgas, chief of ordnance of the Confederate States Army, printed by Evans and Cogswell, Charleston, S. C., in 1863, was among them. A flyleaf inscription amazed Col. Hodges.

The War Department had sent Col. Hodges the personal autographed copy of the Confederate ordnance manual that was presented to President Jefferson Davis of the Confederate States of America by his army chief of ordnance immediately after it was printed in 1863.

The book, as indicated, was taken from Richmond after the evacuation in 1865, and within 60 days was presented by a Union officer to the ordnance office of the War Department at Washington.

Richmond was evacuated on April 2, 1865, and the Confederate President's manual was delivered in Washington on June 2, 1865.

The Second United States Cavalry, an officer of which took the book from Richmond, was the force that opened the fighting in Virginia at Fairfax Courthouse June 1, 1861.

Labor Groups Score ERA, U. S. Pay Cut

New Public Work Plan Urged by Session at Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., May 21 (Spl.).—Assailing the Emergency Relief Administration, urging rapid action on a new Public Works program as a substitute, and demanding immediate restoration of full pay for all Government employes, the District of Columbia and Maryland State Federation of Labor, in session here, moved to obtain necessary changes.

Among the resolutions passed at today's session was the one condemning the "hidden bar" in Washington and a demand that District liquor restrictoins be modified to permit the purchaser to see what is being put into the drink he has ordered.

Another resolution recommended immediate passage of the House bill by the Senate, providing $1,000,000 for the Benning race track at Washington. The measure is scheduled to come before the Senate tomorrow.

Says Health Is Menaced.

Delegate Charles E. Sands, of Washington, led the fight against the "hidden bars," which he termed a "menace to the health of the public."

Other resolutions passed include: Condemning the sale of food in drug stores was returned to committee.

Insisting upon purchase of products union made.

Adoption of the program of the American Federation of Government Employes with the exception of Section 19, which was returned to committee.

Condemning the import tax on spiritous liquors was passed.

The resolution says, "this tax to play into the hands of the whisky trust which apparently controls the available bonded liquor in the United States, forcing the consumer to pay higher prices for bonded liquors, thereby curtailing sales and causing an injury to the workers employed in the industry."

Job Insurance Topic.

"The morning session opened with an address of welcome from Mayor I. M. Wertz, with President J. P. McCurdy, Baltimore, replying.

At this morning's session Miss Lavinia Engle, Montgomery County, president of the Maryland League of Woman Voters, spoke on unemployment insurance and urged the delegates to use their influence in having such a law enacted at the next Maryland General Assembly.

Such a bill was only defeated by three votes at the last special session. She would have the federation also obtain expressions of opinions from all candidates at the fall primaries and election.

Tribute was paid the late Henry H. Broening, Baltimore, and the late vice president, Newton A. James, Washington.

Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore and the Rev. Bruce McDonald, Baltimore, spoke at the afternoon session.

A. E. Hungerford, NRA compliance director for Maryland, and Rabbi Israel, Baltimore, will speak tomorrow, while Gov. Ritchie will speak Wednesday afternoon.

Cole Backers' Mass Meeting Is Set Tonight

Rally Near Baltimore to Further Candidacy for Governor.

Baltimore, May 21 (Spl.).—Continuing the recently instituted movement to boom Representative William P. Cole as Democratic compromise candidate for Governor of Maryland, friends of Mr. Cole will hold a mass meeting tomorrow night at Halethorpe, near here.

The movement, said to have originated among State officials of the Home Owners Loan Corporation whom Cole indorsed for office, is based on the desire to concentrate the Democratic forces.

This is in line with the recent warning from Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), that a fight between Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Gov. Ritchie in the September primaries would defeat the party. The entrance of Dr. William Conley, and possibly State Senator Allan Coad, are believed to have caused further danger of the split in September.

Hanover County Clerics Will Hold Mission Rally

Ashland, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—The semi-annual spring missionary rally of the churches of Hanover County will be held at 11 a. m., Thursday at the Walnut Grove Baptist Church.

Mission Work in Africa will be the topic of the meeting, which will be addressed by the following speakers: the Rev. Robert Turner, Presbyterian; the Rev. Alvin Reynolds, Christian; the Rev. Sam Chilton, Episcopal; the Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, Methodist; the Rev. Mercer O. Clark, Baptist.

Colonial Beach Plans New 400-Foot Pier

Colonial Beach, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Work will begin at once on construction of a new pier at Colonial Beach, the town council decided at the May meeting in final settlement of plans for the project.

A structure of 400 feet in length will be erected to replace the pier destroyed in the hurricane last August. Though Government funds for the new structure were not forthcoming, city officials determined to provide a pier for the convenience of vacationists this season.

Fielding and Strategy Fail as Nats Succumb to Tigers, 6-5, in Ninth

Prim Heaves Ball Against The Fence

By Shirley Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

NAVIN FIELD, Detroit, Mich., May 21.—Minus a motive, but apparently no less intent on results, the Nationals committed a bit of successful hari kiri this afternoon. They beat themselves into submission, leaving the Detroit Tigers the undisputed owners of a 6-5 ball game that was inherited in the ninth inning when Pitcher Ray Prim plunged a stiletto into the innards of his Washington Club in the form of a two-base error.

Prim was the losing pitcher. I'll say he was the losing pitcher. He took a single slammed toward third base by Gerald Walker with none out and the score tied and pitched it up against the right-field boards, enabling Walker to scamper to third base, whnece he eventually scored with the winning run in a ninth inning that was knee-deep in strategy.

Nats Tie in Ninth.

The Nats had just survived their first attempt at self-destruction in the seventh inning by tying the score in the ninth after Joe (himself) Cronin had dissipated a 4-2 lead for Earl Whitehill by attempting to start a double play on a ground ball before stopping it. Quite a trick if it can be done. They say Houdini used to be able to throw the ball before he caught it, but I guess that was in the days before the lively ball came into the big leagues. Anyway, in his haste to begin a double-play proceedings on Rogell's grounder in that seventh inning with the bases full of Tigers, Cronin absent-mindedly forgot about stopping the ball as a preliminary gesture and it bounded through his legs out into center field, while the tying runs scored. Eventually a third run came home and the Tigers were in the lead by 6 to 4.

Before telling you how Ossie Bluege's pinch-hit triple tied the score for the Nats in the ninth, I'd like to bring out exactly how Prim succeeded in throwing the ball game away after Cronin had failed to boot it away. The need of a pinch hitter had taken Whitehill from the game in the first of the ninth and the burden of holding the Tigers was entrusted to Prim.

That Single Towards Third.

As I was saying, Gerald Walker bounced a high single toward third base and was virtually on first base before the ball came to earth in Prim's hands. With Cronin from his position shouting "No! No!" Prim nevertheless made a ridiculous attempt to throw Walker out at first. His heave went into the dirt beyond Kuhel's reach and by the time Dave Harris could retrieve the ball in right field the fleet Walker was on third.

Then the game went dramatic. Cronin ordered the dangerous Gehringer and Rogell passed to fill the bags for a play at the plate and a chance to pitch to Hayworth. He brought in the right-handed McColl to pitch to the Detroit catcher, but Mickey Cochrane countered managerial strategem with managerial strategem and supplanted Hayworth at the plate himself. Thus with a left-handed hitter facing the right-handed McColl Cronin called for Stewart to warm up hurried but the umpires refused to wait until Stewart could work up a perspiration in the bull pen and Cronin decided to trust to luck and McColl. He called in his outfielders to prevent a possible Texas League hit inasmuch as a long fly would score the run anyway and McColl proceeded to pitch to Cochrane. Two balls he threw to Mickey and then he had a two and two count when Mickey fouled off the next two pitches. Then Mickey connected for a nominal fly out into center field, but with Schulte playing far in the ball went over his head for a single that scored Walker —just like that. Incidentally, it ended the Nats' three-game winning streak.

Bluege Slams Triple.

Back there in the Nats' half of the ninth Ossie Bluege came off the bench with one out and the Nats trailing by a run and pinch hit for Whitehill. He whaled a triple into the right-field corner and the score was tied at 5-5 when Travis brought him homew ith a single over second with the Tiger infield in.

Kuhel also singled but the Nats passed up a golden opportunity for additional runs when Manush flied out and Schulte popped to Greenberg with the bases full. There were a couple home runs mixed up in the game in the early inning, one by Red Kress for the Nats and one by Hank Greenberg for the Tigers. Fred Marberry had started out as the pitching opponent of Whitehill but departed the scene in the sixth inning when the Nats took their 4-2 lead and Chief Elon Hogsett, the Cherokee, lasted to the finish.

The Nats had taken a one-run lead back there in the first inning on singles by Travis and Manush but the Tigers tied it up in the second on three singles the last by Owen. With one out in the fourth, Kress smacked his homer over the left field wall and in the Tigers' half Greenberg replied in kind with

High School Star and Tutor

Eastern Star Joins in Lauding Former Big League Hurler.

CHIEF CHARLEY GUYON, veteran coach of the champion Eastern High School baseball team, isn't taking all the credit this year for the Lincoln Parkers' success. He is downright emphatic that a big share of it be showered upon Eastern's eminent professor of pitching, Walter Beall, who spent some ten years earning his baseball degree in such respected institutions as the American and International Leagues.

It was Beall, former New York hurler, who first saw promise of more than an ordinary pitching prospect in Lefty Joe Sullivan, Eastern's mound mainstay. Beall took Sullivan and his battery mate, Joe Keegin, under his wing and taught them baseball as it is played in the big time.

"Sullivan's got the greatest change of pace I've ever seen in a boy of that age," Beall declared. "He learns fast. Joe's going places."

"Walter's helped me a great deal," Sullivan commented. "He always seems to be able to help my pitching somehow. You can't learn too much from an old ball player like him."

The three of them, Beall, Sullivan and Keegin, generally hold a serious counsel before a game with intermittent sessions between innings, after which the former Yank sits back to watch the results of his teachings. The results speak for themselves.

To see the earnest, serious-faced man with the graying hair imparting his baseball knowledge to the eager, young high school boys strikes a somewhat significant reminder of the way the great National pastime is passed on from generation to generation, as much a part of that which is American as the soil they play on.

Four Virginia Towns Form Valley League

Culpeper, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—The Valley League, a four-team semiprofessional baseball organization, has been organized and is made up of the teams from Culpeper, Charlottesville, New Market and Harrisonburg.

It is expected that each team will have two or more salaried players, the ranks to be filled with athletic students home for the summer months.

Burnett Miller, jr., J. B. Hudson, J. J. Davies and William Shelton, with other business men of Culpeper, have lent their aid in the formation of the league, for which by-laws have been adopted, conforming with the rules of the American League.

A schedule of games will call into play each team for two games a week.

West Virginia Golfers Open Tourney July 2

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Completion of plans for the twenty-first annual State tournament of the West Virginia State Golf Association, starting July 2, at White Sulphur Springs, is announced by Boyd E. Hornor, of this city, its president.

Thirty-six holes of qualifying rounds will be played July 2 and 3. The first flight will be played by the 32 low scorers and the second by the next lowest 16, excluding those defeated in the first. The pro-amateur match will be played July 5 and the State professional tournay July 6. The annual ladies' tournament will be held at the same time.

Country clubs of ten cities of the State are included in the association, namely, those at Wheeling, Morgantown, Parkersburg, Clarksburg, Elkins, White Sulphur Springs, Charleston, Beckley, Bluefield and Morgantown. W. Earl Stout, of Clarksburg, is State secretary.

Dunlap Stars In British Amateur

Beats Foe on 22d After Being Dormie 5 Down Starting 14th Hole.

Goodman Idles; Ouimet, Marston and Egan Are Put Out of Tourney.

PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 21 (AP).—A biting 30-mile wind blowing in from the sea today swept America's old guard right out of the British amateur golf championship, but it only inspired the younger group of invaders to play a thrilling brand of golf.

While the veterans Francis Ouimet, Walker Cup captain, H. Chandler Egan and Max Marston found the combination of youth and the elements too much, their younger compatriots carried on to keep Uncle Sam's forces strongly intrenched.

Johnny Goodman, American open champion, the 6-to-1 favorite to win the crown the Hon. Michael Scott let go by default, did not play today. He will play William Robb, of Moseley, in a first round match tomorrow.

Dunlap in Great Rally.

The oldest disciples of British golf were thumbing through musty volumes tonight trying to find anything to compare with George Terry Dunlap's sensational victory over G. P. Packenham Walsh, former champion of India, after he was five holes down and five to go. The consensus was that this amazing feat had no parallel in the annals of this championship.

After being dormie five at the thirteenth, the sandy-haired American amateur champion shook himself loose from the jinx that had crippled his ordinarily precise approaching and putting and dazzled Walsh and a Whitsuntide holiday crowd of 4,000 with a succession of pars to close out the match on the twenty-second hole.

Dunlap, a semifinalist last year, was out in 42, 7 over par, to trial his British rival by 3 holes, dropping 2 on the first 4 to increase his deficit to 5 holes. Then the frail New Yorker unloosed a burst of scoring that, with the wind, almost swept his opponent off the course. He played the remaining 9 holes in 35 strokes. Walsh had to struggle for a 42.

Jack Westland, of Chicago, provided the day's second pluckiest stand when he came back to square his mathch with Robert Harris, former British amateur champion, on the back 9, and then win, 1 up, after 3 extra holes. He trailed Harris by 1 hole at the halfway mark and didn't catch up until the sixteenth, where he had a subpar 3.

Young Gus Moreland, of Dallas, Tex., also showed valiant fighting qualities in overcoming Ouimet's 3-hole advantage at the end of 9 holes, to nose out his veteran countryman 1 up at the eighteenth. Ouimet piled up his big lead on the youngster by virtue of a scorching 33 out. Moreland, playing steadily, went on to win as the Bostonian mislaid his putting touch on the incoming side.

Playing late in the day when the wind was at its height, W. Lawson Little, the doughty Californian, entertained a gallery estimated at 6,000 with a fine exhibition in conquering R. W. Ripley, a British player, 3 and 1. The long-hitting Pacific Coast ace was only five over par for the duration of the match.

Fischer Wins As He Pleases.

Johnny Fischer, tall and spare Cincinnati youth, played spotty golf but won much as he pleased over K. Graham Patrick, of Britain. Although Fischer was considerably above regulation figures, he disposed of Patrick by a 4-and-3 count. Jessie Guilford, of Boston, and a former U. S. amateur champion, won handily from R. A. Howell, despite the small score of 2 and 1.

Other Americans who gained the second round were A. W. Breault, of Detroit, who defeated S. Hamilton Gibbs, of Britain, 5 and 4, and P. A. Valentine, of New York, who won by default from S. J. Chesterton, of Britain. R. C. Van Arsdale, of Boston, was eliminated by A. J. Peech, of Britain, 4 and 2. Douglas Grant, a former Californian now living in London, vanquished W. W. Sharp, of Dunbar, 4 and 3, to move up.

The oldsters, Marston and Egan, "just simply weren't hitting them," they said after their matches. Egan fell a victim to J. Wallace, a British carpenter, 3 and 2, while Marston lost to D. H. R. Martin, of Britain, 3 and 1.

The only British star to suffer elimination was Harry Bentley, a member of the 1934 Walker Cup squad, who lost to Ivor Thomas, 5 and 4.

Averill Star As Yankees Bow, 9-5

Hits 2 Homers, Drives in 5 Runs as Tribe Triumphs Again.

Indians Jump on Uhle for Early Lead; Hudlin Halts New York.

CLEVELAND, May 21 (AP).—Paced by Earl Averill's two home runs, his fourth and fifth of the season, the Cleveland Indians won their second straight game at the expense of the New York Yankees today, slugging out a 9-to-5 victory.

George Uhle, once ace pitcher of the Indians, was the victim of Cleveland's first and second inning onslaught that netted five runs. The tribe fell on the 36-year-old right-hander for three runs in the first inning, Averill's first home run sending the trio of tallies across the plate.

Uhle Sent to Showers.

They drove their former teammate to cover in the second, when they counted two more times, and continued to peper Russell Van Atta through the remainder of the game. Averill got his second circuit drive in the sixth with the bases empty.

In addition to his two homers, Averill connected with a single to drive in five runs altogether. Dick Porter and Billy Knickerbocker also got three hits each for the Indians while Bill Dickey and Earl Combs did the same for the Yankees.

Willis Hudlin went the route for Cleveland, scoring his third victory of the season and handing the Yankees their fourth defeat in five games.

Vaughan Leads Bucs In Defeating Phillies

Philadelphia, May 21 (AP).—Pittsburgh pounded Pearce and A. Moore for 17 hits today, defeating the Phillies, 11 to 4, in the second game of the series.

Vaughan led the attack for the Pirates with four hits, including a double and a home run. Lavagetto was not far behind with three hits —a brace of two-baggers and a home run. He drove in five Pirate runs, Larry French went the entire distance.

Attempting a double play in the eighth, Vaughan hit Dick Bartell on the head with the ball and the shortstop was knocked unconscious. Bartell quickly recovered but was forced to leave the game.

X-Ray Dissipates Fear Wood Will Be Off Davis Cup Team

PHILADELPHIA, May 21 (AP).—Fears that the United States Davis Cup tennis team might be without the services of Sidney B. Wood, jr., New York ace, were dissipated tonight with announcement that preliminary study of X-ray pictures indicates Wood's suspected rib fractures are merely bruises.

Although the final diagnosis will not be made utnil tomorrow, Dr. Herbert Fischer, of Ardmore, said the drying X-ray films thus far show no sign of fracture, but rather indicate bruises that will not halt the New York netman's play.

Wood's injury, received in an automobile accident at Tuxedo, N. Y., two weeks ago, was disclosed yesterday when observers at the Davis Cup squad practices at the Merion Cricket Club noticed adhesive tape binding his upper body.

Wood's loss would have been a severe blow to America's Davis Cup prospects. He is looked upon by many observers as the best hope against Jack Crawford, Australian Davis Cup captain, and Bunny Austin, English star.

Assurance of Wood's availability, coupled with Wilmer Allison's announcement of his recovery from ankle injuries received in the recent Chevy Chase invitation doubles tourney at Washington, brings the United States cup team back to full strength for the opening of the international contests.

The New Yorker was not scheduled to play in the first-round matches against Canada at Wilmington, Del., starting Thursday, but is expected to have plenty of time to get ready for the match with Mexico in event of victory against the Canadians.

Giants' Rookie Stops Rush Of Cards

Bowman Hurls When Fitzsimmons Is Hurt and Wins Game, 5 to 2.

NEW YORK, May 21 (AP).—The world champion Giants survived another pitching emergency today and checked the onrushing St. Louis Cardinals with a 5-2 victory at the expense of "Wild Bill" Hallahan.

An accident to fat Freddy Fitzsimmons, who was struck in the side by a loose bat just as he started to warm up, forced Manager Bill Terry to put the pitching burden up to the recruit, Joe Bowman. After being hit for a home run by Burgess Whitehead, the first batter to face him, Bowman pitched himself out of subsequent danger and finished strongly with the aid of brisk defense. Fitzsimons was not seriously hurt.

Jackson's Homer Ties.

The Giants tied the score on Travis Jackson's home run against the upper right field stands, with Homer Peel on base, in the fourth. Terry's Texas league single to left, which Joe Medwick mishandled, enabled Joe Moore to race home with the winning run from first in the fifth inning.

As a crowning touch to his late-inning difficulties, Hallahan passed Jackson intentionally to fill the bases in the eighth, whereupon Blondy Ryan smashed a single to center, tallying Ott and Peel with the runs that sewed up the ball game.

Morgan Puts Red Sox Over by 3-Run Homer

Chicago, May 21 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox took a ten-inning game from the White Sox, 13 to 10, today after Manager Jimmie Dykes tied the score at 10-all for the home club with a home run with the bases filled in the eighth inning.

Eddie Morgan, Boston first baseman who defeated the White Sox with a home run with two on in the seventh inning yesterday, repeated his three-run homer in the same frame today, again driving Bill Cissell and Bill Werber ahead of him.

Johnny Welch, who shut out the White Sox the last two innings, received credit for the victory. Whitlow Wyatt was the losing relief pitcher for the second straight day.

Sergt. Byrne Defeats Chicstraw, 9-to-5 Favorite, in Handicap Race at Belmont

Nose Victory For First Minstrel

Candidates for Withers and Belmont Stakes Are Exhibited.

BELMONT PARK RACE TRACK, May 21 (AP).—A number of candidates for the Withers and Belmont stakes were on exhibition here today. George D. Widener's Chicstraw, making his first start since winning the Endurance Handicap at Bowie last fall, started as a 9-to-5 favorite in the 6 furlongs of the Frair Rock Handicap.

The son of Chicle failed to win but he turned in a highly encouraging effort to finish second to the speedy Sergeant Byrne. The latter, flying the silks of John Simonetti, came within two-fifths of a second of the track record for the main course, winning by four lengths in 1:10 2-5. Chicstraw beat Mrs. W. M. Jefford's filly, Flying Hour, by three lengths for the place, Roustabout finished fourth.

Horses Crowded in Race.

There might have been a different result if the race had been truly run. Just after the start Brandon Mint came over from an outside position and crowded several horses, chiefly Pomposity and Roustabout. Sergeant Byrne, meanwhile, was winging out in front.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's First Minstrel, and J. E. Widener's Peace Chance staged one of the most exciting finishes of the year in the Campfire Purse of one mile.

Both eligible for the Withers and Belmont, they passed the judges eight lengths clear of the remainder of the field so closely aligned that only the judges could see that First Minstrel got up in the very last nod. Mrs. Dodge Sloane's 30-to-1 shot, Good Goods, was third. First Minstrel ran the mile in 1:38 flat and paid the liberal odds of 16-to-1.

Charmed Eyes Is Victor.

Eighteen 2-year-old platers got off to a perfect start in the four-and-a-half dash in the first race. Charmed Eyes, 6-to-1 second choice to Teeter Totter, won. Second money went to Migrate. Anstreon was third.

The veteran F. A. Clark jumper, Speckled Beauty II, was an easy winner of the steeplechase contest, winning by four lengths at 9 to 2. Alpheus, owned by Mrs. F. A. Clark, made most of the pace and held on to save the place by a head from Quick March. Rideaway, 2-to-1 choice, showed brief early speed but was distanced at the end.

Augusta Nine Closes Season at Fishburn

The Augusta Military Academy will close its 1934 baseball season at Fort Defiance Wednesday, when it meets the strong Fishburne Military Academy. Augusta defeated Fishburne in their first game at Waynesboro, but since then Fishburne has won three of her four games and promises to give the Augusta lads a real battle.

Augusta has been undefeated in prep school ranks in the State for the past two years and presents one of the best baseball teams in the school's history. In Daughtery and Roberson, it has two of the best pitchers in the State. Together they have allowed only 88 hits, 46 runs, struck out 197 and given 32 bases on balls in 16 games. Bibb, center fielder, leads the hitters with .444, and has banged out 3 doubles, 6 triples and 5 homers in 63 times at bat. Nottingham, shortstop, is close behind with .426. The team is batting the high mark of .352, with 8 of the first nine men hitting over .300. Augusta has already a clear title to the State championship for 1934, regardless of the outcome of Wednesday's game.

Flynn Hurls 21-0 Win For Mount St. Joseph

Baltimore, Md., May 21 (Spl.).—While Pitcher Flynn was limiting the opposition to three scattered hits, Mount St. Joseph's baseball team got to the offerings of two Charlotte Hall twirlers for 16 bingles and a 21-to-0 victory today.

The Josephites scored in all innings, staging their greatest rellies in the second and third innings when eight and five men scored, respectively. The game was seven innings.

Bowers and Reggan pitched for Charlotte Hall.

Toltec Wins Aurora Race at Long Odds

Aurora, Ill., May 21 (AP).—Toltec, racing in the colors of M. McClead and ridden by Jockey H. Manifold, won the top race at Aurora today by four lengths eased up. Mrs. A. K. Miller's Dauntless Miss nosed out F. Wright's Miss Chilla for the place in the 5½ furlongs feature. Toltec was neglected in the wagering because of his two previous poor races.

Toltec showed a sudden reversal of form and ran the distance in 1:06, paying $20.24 in the $2 win mutuels.

Belmont Park, May 21.

Dear Al:

I certainly will be glad to get back on a track that has eight races a day. Up here with only six chances, the winners are few and far between. Today I managed to get one winner, two seconds and a third. Two of my choices were 40 to 1 and nowhere. It looks as though I will have to wire for Clocker Mike before the week is out. I understand that he is no great shakes at Hagerstown. However, I dragged out the speed books tonight, gave myself a lot of false courage and came out with a few that may chase the jinx that has been trailing me.

BILL.

First race—Night Sprite might make it three in a row here. A fit one that can turn on a lot of speed over the sprint course. Mountain Elk is dangerous despite the load of weight. Brown Jack to take care of the others.

Second race—Irish Bullet appears best suited of these timber-toppers. Reported fit and ready for competition. Daniel Soot has shown excellent form this spring and is the one to fear. Maid of Mars to show.

Third race—Back Fence has shown more than the rest of these juveniles. Has threatened often and appears to have found the right spot at last. Fake lived up to his name in Maryland. Can do better than those recent tries. Shady Past for the other award.

Fourth race—High Glee appears to be a standout in this field despite the assignment of 121 pounds and deserves the Bennings first string pick. However, I'm going to warn you about Hindu Queen, a filly, packing a lot of punch and one that is likely to be uncomfortable close at the pay-off. Dusky Princess for the third money.

Fifth race—Dark Winter has two straight wins to his credit and is the logical selection here. Monel and, Thursday to lead the others to the wire. The last-named likes the course.

Sixth race—Brass Monkey favors the route and may crack down at good odds. Bannach Lath and Pelham have fighting chances.

M. A. Pro Golf Field Led by Shorey

D. C. Star Has Par 70 Card; Treder, Houghton Still in the Running.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 21 (Spl.).—Mel Shorey, the consistently classy pro from East Potomac Park, in Washington, matched the antics of a hot thermometer today at Hillendale Country Club. The sun blazed overhead, and so did his long shots. The heat burnt the course and his putter set the greens afire. By three strokes, he set the pace for the leading pros from this district and Washington to capture the medal in the Middle Atlantic Professional Golfers Association tournament with an even 70.

Shorey's score matched par exactly, with four birdies and a like number of holes in one over par. His incoming nine was a sub-par 34. Then, in the afternoon, he trounced Alex Taylor, of Rolling Road, 6 and 5. He led the way into the second round with eight surviving from a starting field of 14. Two other Washingtonians and five Baltimoreans remain in the running.

Beach Scores a 74.

Ralph Beach, of the Suburban Club, who is defending champion, paced along easily, scoring a 74 in the qualifying play and conquering Bill Scott, of the Baltimore Country Club, 4 and 3.

Frank Invernizzi, of Forest Park, had a torrid battle with Leo Walper, of Washington, going two extra holes to win.

Glenn Spencer conquered Bill Shreiber and Al Treder eliminated Cliff Spencer in other first-round matches. Carroll T. MacMaster, host pro, and Al Houghton, of Kenwood, drew first round byes.

Following the golf, a meeting was held for the purpose of electing a successor to Warner Mather as secretary-treasurer, and MacMaster was chosen.

The second and third rounds of match play will be held tomorrow, clearing the way for a 36-hole final Wednesday.

Shorey's card:

Out	5	3	3	4	3	5	4	6	—36
In	4	4	3	4	4	4	2	5	—34—70
Par—	4	4	3	4	4	4	3	5	—36—70
Out	4	4	4	3	5	4	4	3	—35
In	4	4	3	5	4	4	3	4	—36—70

Medal and First-Round Scores.

Ralph Beach, Suburban Club (74), defeated Bill Scott, Baltimore Country Club (82) 4 and 3. Invernizzi, Forest Park (75), defeated Leo Walper, Washington (74), 1 up, 20 holes; Glenn Spencer, Maryland Country Club (78), defeated Bill Schrieber, Clifton (79), 4 and 3; Al Houghton, Kenwood (73), bye; Charlie Betschier, Rogers Forge (77), defeated John Hass, Clifton (73), 4 and 1; Al Treder, Manor Club (78), defeated Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam (77), 3 and 2; Carroll T. McMaster, Hillendale (78), bye; Mel Shorey, East Potomac Park (70), defeated Peter Taylor, Rolling Road (76), 6 and 5.

Second-round pairings—8:45. Beach vs. Invernizzi. Spencer vs. Houghton. Betschier vs. Treder. MacMaster vs. Shorey.

Charity Day Card Ends Downs Meet

Churchill Downs Race Track, May 21 (AP).—Spring racing came to a close at Churchill Downs this afternoon as a seven-race program was staged in the interests of charity. The entire proceeds of the day went to the Louisville Community Chest.

Although the clubhouse crowd fell below expectations, the grand-stand attendance was well up to standard and with 5,000 programs sold, it was estimated that 7,500 were on hand.

Frank Ormont, from the stable of Wood F. Axton, local owner, captured the handicap in a driving finish from Ridgemore and Jessie Dear, while the latter purse went to Lafoon and Yeiser's Shepherd Boy, trained by Roscoe Goose, a member of the horsemen's committee which solicited entries for the benefit. Second and third money went to My Blaze and Cherry Time.

Stocks Record Gain in Lightest Sale of Decade

In five hours of colorless trading, transfers on the stock exchange totaled only 382,190 shares, the smallest recorded since June 2, 1924.

Stagnation which set in following a broad rally in prices last week became more pronounced as Wall street waited for President Roosevelt's message on silver, scheduled tomorrow, and for further light on potential effects on Federal control of stock exchanges.

Metal Groups Firm.

Anticipation of the silver message stirred up a little buying in metal shares and strength in that group helped to impart a firm undertone to the list generally. The average price of 90 stocks closed up 0.4 of a point at 78.4, making the third consecutive session of negligible change in the position of the general market.

The picture of inertia presented by the languid stock ticker was typical of most financial markets, for the day's news contained nothing to stimulate interest in either the buying or the selling side.

Net gains of fractions to 3 points were made by leading metal shares, including American Smelting & Refining, U. S. Smelting, Howe Sound and Cerro de Pasco. American Telephone, American Can, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Bethlehem Steel an. other old trading favorites sold up fractionally on comparatively small sales. Du Pont firmed as directors placed the stock on a $2.60 annual basis compared with $2 previously.

Most commodities moved narrowly with stocks.

Silver Message Awaited.

Scanning the horizon for news which might break the stalemate, Wall street looked hopefully toward the promised Presidential message on silver, although the main points of the Administration's silver program were believed to have been outlined last week.

Falling off in trading attributable to the silver message, however, merely accentuated tendencies in evidence for some time.

Since the spring decline was checked a week ago, no definite trend has developed and until one appears or important news is forthcoming to stir interest, traders and the public were inclined to stay out of the market.

Brokers were fearful current dullness might be a sample of what Wall street would expect under rigid governmental control of speculation, although it was conceded renewed improvement in business should stir up more public interest in security markets.

For the moment, business news offered little in way of incentive toward buying. Routine statistics indicated recession in business activity continued last week, although it was not great enough to cause much uneasiness.

The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated steel operations had declined to 54.2 per cent of capacity from 56.6 per cent a week ago, the first important setback since the recent sharp increase in steel output.

Former Chief of NRA Planning Division Outlines Needed Changes if Codes Are to Continue to Be of Benefit.

By Ralph West Robey.

In the current furor about NRA it is welcome relief to find an analysis that does not base its charges upon emotions and its defense upon idealism. Such an analysis is provided by Mr. Alexander Sachs, formerly chief of the planning division of NRA, in a Swarthmore College lecture that has just been printed.

It is, it seems to me, by all odds the best appraisal of the aims, accomplishments and permanent possibilities of the NRA that has been made.

No one can read it without appreciating why the NRA appealed to believers in the need of an overhauling of the industrial system, or without understanding why continued association with the organization became impossible by those who understand the intricacies of such an overhauling.

The study covers the entire period of the NRA. Of most interest at the moment, however, are the changes that Mr. Sachs believes essential if the NRA is to remain a favorable factor in our business structure.

Summarizing these is a difficult task, because the analysis is exceptionally complete in its consideration of basic economic forces. In general, nevertheless, they concern three broad points, referring respectively to the service trades and small industries, the natural resources industries, and the manufacturing and technological industries.

Would Withdraw From a Large Part of the Field.

As to the first of these the course advised by Sachs is one of withdrawal. He thinks the NRA should "abandon any attempt at price-fixing and control in the service trades.

"They, together with all small industries, in his opinion, should be excluded from industrial planning unless a specific need is demonstrated."

Further, he holds that in the retail, jobbing and distribution trades, the NRA should withdraw on price-fixing and, in fact, should eliminate the code machinery, except to meet specific evils, such as the "loss-leader."

This, however, is only one side of his proposals for these trades and industries. Along with it goes the development of a new "law merchant," enforced by the courts or "carried out by arbitral tribunals." The purpose of this is to raise the standard of competition.

How much he thinks can be accomplished in this direction is not indicated, and from the point of view of the desirability of the attempt perhaps is of secondary importance.

The significant aspect of the suggestion is that it would prevent the codes from being used as a cover for practices that go contrary to social purposes.

Natural Industries to Remain Under Codes.

In connection with the natural resource industries Sachs is in favor of continued regulation. He believes that in these cases there are "National economic reasons" for subjecting these industries to a greater degree of price and production control than the rest. These reasons are obvious—the protection of our natural resources, &c.

Manufacturing and technological industries also are to be kept under codes. The purpose of the codes, however, will be vastly different from, at least, the uses to which they have been put. As Sachs sees it, codes should be used to improve the "adequate and efficient functioning of competition," not the elimination of competition. Were his suggestion followed, accordingly, it would mean a change in the very idea upon which many of our codes have been based.

To try to bring the NRA into harmony with such suggestions would be, obviously, an enormous task. It seems to me, nevertheless, that there is much reason to believe that if a drive in the direction of the proposals of Sachs is not made, the NRA will become more and more of a depressant upon business.

Curb's Prices Close Mixed in Dull Trading

Many Stocks Hold to Level of Previous Session; Sales, 119,000 Shares.

New York, May 21 (AP).—The curb market closed narrowly irregular today in the dullest full trading session since September 13, 1933. Business was virtually at a standstill at times, particularly in the fourth hour when only 9,000 shares changed hands.

Numerous stocks closed practically unchanged. Only a few gained 2¼ points in a transfer of several hundred shares, while Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Hiram Walker each dipped a point in even quieter dealings.

Electric Bond & Share, Standard Oil of Indiana, Swift & Co., Greyhound Corporation, Natomas and Lake Shore finished unchanged to slightly higher. American Gas & Electric, Sherwin Williams and Swift International ended a trifle lower.

Transfers which approximated only 119,000 shares were about half the total for last Friday.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; Tone Steady

Traders and Investors Wait on Washington; Sales $8,219,000.

New York, May 21 (AP).—Bond market prices maintained a fairly steady tone today, although the trading dullness was almost as pronounced as that of stocks.

Transfers totaled only $8,219,000, par value, compared with $13,877,000 last Friday.

The aggregate was the smallest since October 3, 1933. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 86.2.

Traders Still Waiting.

Most traders and investors were inclined to suspend operations while waiting for further developments at Washington. Much interest was expressed in the silver message which the President is expected to transmit to Congress tomorrow. The decline in steel production was being watched closely for indications of recessions in other industries.

United States Government securities showed a turnover of some $2,700,000, and the majority registered declines of 1-32 to 7-32 of a point.

The rails, as a group, showed some improvement. Gainers in this department of fractions to a point or more included some liens of Alleghany Corporation, Santa Fe, Boston & Maine, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, Southern, Erie, Denver & Rio Grande, New York Central, Nickel Plate and Louisville & Nashville. Wabash second 5s lost 3½ points.

Writing Paper Up.

American Writing Paper 6s got up 2 points and modest advances were recorded by loans of American Telephone, Armour & Co., McKesson, Mead Corporation, Consolidated Gas, Otis Steel, International Telephone and Goodyear.

Foreign obligations were listless. Bonds of Colombia, Bogota and Bolivia moved up a point or more.

RFC Loans to Aid 2,110 Banks Rise to Total of $788,027,177

(Associated Press.)

Loans to 2,110 banks for liquidation purposes totaling $788,027,177 were made public yesterday by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Chairman Jones said $250,000,000 more would be about all it could lend on collateral in banks which have not yet asked for or received loans. There are between 700 and 800 banks which have not applied for receivers' or conservators' loans.

There still is $3,500,000,000 owing by closed banks to depositors, but Jones expressed the opinion $2,500,000,000 of this was "lost" and not represented by frozen assets.

The largest loans were to receivers and conservators of the First National Bank of Detroit and the Guardian National Bank of Commerce of Detroit. The First National has received a total of $83,609,000, of which $48,000,000 was lent to the receiver and the remainder to the conservator.

The Guardian received $36,891,000, of which $4,391,000 was to the conservator and the balance to the receiver.

The Guardian Trust Co. of Cleveland received loans totaling $27,755,474 and the Union Trust Co. of Cleveland $48,645,576.

The first Central Trust Co. of Akron, Ohio, received $25,485,000. The loans ranged from $20,000 or less upward.

The corporation also reported that it had made commitments to 32 mortgage loan companies which are being formed to liquidate closed banks.

These loans include $1,018,977 to a proposed company to handle the Tennessee Valley Bank at Decatur, Ala.; $50,000 to the St. Tammany Holding Co., Inc., of Covington, La., in connection with the Commercial Bank & Trust Co.; $56,000 to a company to handle the Peoples State Bank at New Boston, Mass.; $35,000 to a company that would take over the Citizens National Bank at Newmarket, Va., and $4,906,278 for mortgage companies proposed to take over the assets of 28 closed Michigan banks.

Wool Markets.

Boston, May 21 (A.P.). (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—New fleece wools appeared a little steadier as late reports indicated that it had become difficult to buy in the country at the recent low prices offered, and that occasional prices slightly higher than recent lows had been paid. Dealers here recently bought sparingly of the new fleeces offered from the country and a few users placed buying orders at low bids.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported in Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ending May 19, amounted to 1,828,600 pounds compared with 1,202,200 during the previous week.

DuPont Votes 60-Cent Boost On Dividend

Otis Steel Companies Net of $652,889 Halts Prior Losses.

New York, May 21 (AP).—Directors of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. today increased the dividend on the common stock 60 cents annually with the declaration of a quarterly payment of 65 cents a share compared with 50 cents previously paid.

The dividend is payable June 15 to stock of record May 31.

The Otis Steel Co. reports net profit in the first quarter of $852,889 compared with a net loss of $700,371 in the first quarter of 1933. The 1934 profit was arrived at after interest, depreciation, amortization and other charges, but before Federal taxes.

National Power and Light Co. reports consolidated net income of $6,615,768 for the year ended December 31. After dividend requirements on the preferred stock there was a balance of 90 cents a share for the common. In the previous year the balnce applicable to the common stock was equal to $1.26 a share.

The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey's annual report for 1933 shows consolidated net income of $25,084,310 after all charges, or the equivalent of 97 cents a share on the capital stock. For 1932 the company reported net income of $282,869, which was equal to one cent a share.

Current assets at the close of 1933 amounted to $557,678,392 and current liabilities to $150,501,194, compared with $574,782,127 and $127,630,881 respectively, at the end of 1932.

Cash, including call loans of $12,580,702 and bankers' acceptances, declined from $116,857,704 to $105,525,187. Marketable securities were carried at cost of $83,258,469 compared with $61,772,892 at the end of 1932.

Bank Stocks Drop During Past Week

New York, May 21.—New York City bank stocks registered a further decline during the past week. The aggregate value of the sixteen leading issues, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster, totaled $1,543,083,000 on May 18, as compared with $1,566,672,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $23,589,000, or 1.51 per cent.

The current average yield of the sixteen issues of 5.19 per cent compares with a yield of 5.11 per cent at the close of the previous week. The current market value is now 1.29 times their known book value, against 1.30 times on May 11.

Based upon current figures the sixteen issues are now quoted at an average of 12.3 times their known earnings, against 12.5 times on May 11.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

Foreign currencies moved slightly higher against the dollar yesterday in an exchange market restricted by the holiday abroad.

The pound sterling gained ¼ cent in New York, closing at $5.11¼, compared with $5.11 on Saturday. French francs moved up 0.00½ of a cent to 6.61½ cents. German marks were strong, advancing 0.10 of a cent to 39.80. Swiss francs lagged behind other gold currencies, remaining unchanged at 32.58, while other units showed small gains.

At the closing price for French francs in New York, the dollar was valued at a premium of 0.28 of a cent over par. This compared with a premium of 0.35 of a cent on Saturday and with a discount below par of 0.77 of a cent a month ago.

Food Sales Increase.

Chicago, May 21 (AP).—A Nationwide survey by the Progressive Grocer showed that food and grocery sales in retail groceries were 14 per cent ahead in dollar volume for the first four months of 1934 compared with the same period last year.

British Sales of Spirits To U. S. Are Increased

The extent to which the repeal of prohibition in the United States has benefited the British liquor-producing industry is indicated in a report from the American Consulate General, London, made public by the Commerce Department.

During the first quarter of the current year, the report shows, exports of spirits from Great Britain to the American market reached a total of 814,628 gallons out of total shipments to the whole world of 1,831,576 gallons and compared with only 1,087 gallons in the first quarter 1933.

Auburn Export Orders Continue to Increase

Auburn, Ind., May 21—Auburn delivered 10 per cent more cars to export markets in the first four and a half months of 1934 than during the entire previous year, it was announced here today by factory officials. There has been no let-up in demand and the backlog of unfilled export orders is practically equal to that of two months ago, it was also pointed out. Auburn has added 27 new accounts in 20 countries since January 1.

Wheat Values Sink on Cool Weather Fear

Buying Slackens as Prices Drop 3/8 to 3/4; Oats Advance.

Chicago, May 21 (AP).—Official forecasts indicating much cooler weather with frost possibilities for the Dakotas, Minnesota and Nebraska tonight did much to make grain values average lower today.

An outstanding feature of wheat trading was slackness of sustained buying on price advances, the most noticeable of which accompanied definite word that President Roosevelt's silver message to Congress would be delivered tomorrow.

The chief apparent reason given for lack of continued aggressive buying was talk in some quarters that the domestic carry-over of wheat July 1 next promised to total as much as 250,000,000 bushels, a considerable portion of which would likely have to be disposed of abroad.

Wheat Closes Unsteady.

Wheat closed unsteady at about the day's bottom level, ⅜ to ¾ under Saturday's finish; corn, ⅜ to ⅝ down; oats, unchanged to ¼ higher, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10 cents.

Numerous advances and setbacks in wheat values took place with abnormal heat and persistent widespread drought largely responsible for transient upturns.

Price bulges, however, invited profit-taking, and found buyers cautious, although many traders appeared greatly impressed at the pessimistic character of crop reports, and the market rose temporarily more than a cent a bushel over Saturday's close. Fairly good rains were reported in parts of the Canadian Prairies, but moisture this side of the border was meager, no point in the Dakotas receiving as much as half an inch of rain.

Crop Loss Reports.

Tending to check price declines in the wheat market were statements by a leading crop expert returning from a trip to near the Canadian boundary. He telegraphed from Omaha tha crop conditions were bad, with small grains poor down the Red River Valley, and almost all blown out for 15 miles from Breckenridge south. Further southward, he said, wheat fields remaining were but two inches tall, whereas they should be six inches.

Corn followed wheat most of the day. Fears were expressed by some traders that any material upturn of corn prices would result in larger rural offerings, especially wherever 45 cents could be obtained for corn at interior loading stations. Crop damage reports gave independent strength to oats.

Provisions rose because of liberal export shipments of lard and on account of expected good cash demand for meats.

German Iron and Steel Trade Activity Continues

The brisk demand which has been noted in the German market for iron and steel scrap for several months continues unaltered, according to a report from Vice Consul J. H. Wright, Cologne, made public by the Commerce Department.

Prices remain strong due to extensive demand from the iron and steel manufacturing industry, which is enjoying good occupation. Further price increases are not unlikely, it is pointed out, and if such increases are carried through it will probably become profitable to use more pig iron as a substitute for scrap.

Steel Operation Drops 3 Points To 59 Per Cent

Cancellations of Orders by Auto Manufacture Is Big Factor.

Cleveland, May 21.—Slackening in steel specifications, with some suspensions of material recently released by the automobile industry, and actual cancellations of orders for automobile parts by one of the leading manufacturers, resulted last week in a 3-point decline in steelwork operations, to 50 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

Neither the increase in demand from railroads and some miscellaneous manufacturing lines nor the incentive to manufacture for stock against the possibility of a general strike in the iron and steel industry proved sufficient to offset the reduction in automobile production and the lack of large-scale structural steelwork.

Finishing mill operations, especially in sheets and strip, have become disarranged, with some producers unable to accept any more specifications for delivery before June 30, and others with considerably more tonnage released for shipment in June than over the remainder of this month.

Drop Not Disconcerting.

The drop in specifications has not been disconcerting to many producers, who admittedly would have been unable to manufacture all the material they had contracted for, and who expected some cancellations.

May 21 is the date set by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers for presenting demands for recognition, giving the industry three weeks in which to comply.

While less than 10 per cent of all iron and steel wage earners are enrolled in trade unions, as calculated by steelmakers, the threat is disturbing, owing to the demonstrated ability of small minorities to impose their will by picketing and intimidation.

Trouble Is Threatening.

Striking at the foundation of the industry labor organizers are threatening trouble in the Lake Superior iron ore district. This industry has been operating under the general steel code and a hearing on an individual code is scheduled in Washington April 22.

With more than 36,000,000 tons of iron ore in stock in upper and lower lake districts and monthly consumption now around 2,500,000 tons, no difficulty is expected immediately from this source.

The uncertainties of the general iron and steel situation are reflected in further decline in prices of scrap in practically all centers, Steel's iron and steel scrap composite this week off 37 cents to $11.21, a net reduction of $1.20 from the recent peak.

Prices Carry Over.

Current steel prices, incorporating recent advances, are likely to be extended into the third quarter on the majority of products when books are opened June 1, as under the steel code new prices to be effective that date would have to be filed May 21, and there has been no movement in that direction.

An increase of $3 a ton in cold-finished steel bars is expected in June. Extension of the steel code itself from its expiration date May 31 is assured with prospects for the establishment of some additional basing points and recognition of water shipments.

Railroad purchases in the week included 35,000 tons of rails by the Chesapeake & Ohio and 200 70-ton hopper cars by the Central of Georgia, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific is to build 50 streamlined passenger and 25 baggage cars in its own shops. Twelve hundred freight cars still are pending.

Awards Change Little.

Structural shape awards for the week, 18,178 tons, show little change from the preceding week. The steel industry does not expect to benefit from the $940,900,000 additional appropriation proposed by the President for public work until late in the year. The Great Lakes Pipe Line Co., Kansas City, Mo., has awarded 11,000 tons of 8⅝-inch steel pipe for a 189-mile line to the A. O. Smith Corporation, Milwaukee.

Steelworks operations last week were up 1 point to 78 per cent, Cleveland; 4 to 84, New England; 1½ to 53½, Birmingham. They were down 5 to 74, Wheeling; ½-point to 64, Chicago; 5 to 62, Youngstown; and were unchanged at 100, Detroit; 51, Pittsburgh; 45, eastern Pennsylvania; 66, Buffalo. Tin-plate operations increased 5 points to 75 per cent at Pittsburgh.

Municipal Financing Drops.

New York, May 21 (AP).—New municipal financing scheduled for this week amounts to $11,081,810 against $16,247,867 last week, according to the Daily Bond Buyer.

Bonus Army Will Tackle Senate Today

Committees Are Named to Urge Legislative Actions.

Some 500 men were selected from the ranks of the bonus army convention yesterday for a March on the Senate today with demands for cash payment of their adjusted service certificates.

According to a plan of action mapped out at the close of the convention's opening session in Washington Auditorium yesterday, the men will be split into committees of three or four representing the 43 attending State delegations for a succession of calls at Senate offices.

It was the hope of convention leaders that each committee would be able to call at each senatorial office. The convention's legislative program, prepared by a legislation committee for the consideration of the whole body, calls for farmer and unemployed aid and economy act repeal as well as bonus payment, but it was the temper of the delegates yesterday to stress the latter issue almost to the exclusion of the others.

It was a difference of opinion over inclusion of relief proposals in the convention program that provided the only inharmonious not at yesterday's proceedings. A ringing plea for the veterans to make the bonus their only consideration was delivered by James J. Beatty, a member of the National rank and file committee of three in charge of the convention, immediately after Emanuel Levin, chairman of the rank and file legislation committee, had completed an exposition of the three-point program.

The convention accepted "in principal" the proposals by Levin, an active member of the Workers Former Service Mens League, deferring final action until a later session.

Meanwhile, at the Fort Hunt (Va.) encampment from which the veterans were transported to the Capital in buses furnished by the local office of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, arrivals of fresh bonus delegations continued, swelling the registration total to 1,341.

Though an overwhelming majority of the veterans were known strongly to oppose leaving the Capital until the Senate has acted on the bonus bill or has adjourned, their leaders were silent on their plans. Use of the auditorium for further sessions will be denied them, officials of the Veterans' Administration who are supervising the convention, said. Meetings will be held at Fort Hunt until Thursday, the dead line for the army's evacuation.

Whatever action is to be taken will be determined by the veterans themselves, leaders said, though Levin, in asking for volunteers for duty at the Senate today, urged the delegates to "show them that they can't kill the bonus bill at this session of Congress without hearing from us."

Another leader of the convention, George Allman, a member of the "committee of three," declared that before the army was disbanded he would urge it to "stand tight on the bonus and accept no substitutes." He said he referred to Civilian Conservation Camp enlistments offered the veterans by President Roosevelt last year "to make them forget about the bonus and to get them away from Washington."

FERA busses will again be furnished the bonus seekers for the trip to the Senate today.

A. G. O. Team Wins.

Louis Cooke, the Babe Ruth of the Federal League, clousted a homer in the first inning with two on the bases, as Adjutan General's Office defeated Civil Service, 5 to 1, in a 5-inning game. This was the fifth consecutive victory for A. G. O.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The celebrated battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac—a battle which is listed in history books throughout the world as the one which opened the era of armorclad battleships and rendered all others obsolete—was never fought. The Merrimac was sunk several months before the Monitor was built.

This statement, made several weeks ago in the Sunday color page of Strange As It Seems, is repeated here in the daily drawing because thousands of readers have written asking for proof and explanation. Many readers, chiefly school children and teachers, indignantly suggested that I read my history of the Civil War before making any more such statements. But the fact remains:

The Monitor and the Merrimac never fought. Here is the story:

In 1861 at the outset of the Civil War, the Union forces abandoned Gosport Navy Yard, where the Merrimac was stationed. Before leaving they scuttled the ship, sinking her in shallow water. Confederate forces took over the navy yard and a few months later raised the wrecked hull, rebuilt her as an ironclad, and christened the ship the Virginia. The Virginia was commissioned in March, 1862.

The Monitor, commissioned by the Union forces in February, 1862, left New York the following month, arriving at Hampton Roads on March 8. The next morning, when the Virginia moved out to attack the Union ship Minnesota, the Monitor advanced to meet her. It was then the famous battle between the ironclads took place—it was between the Monitor and the Virginia.

The Merrimac never was an ironclad ship, she never was in the Confederate navy, and she never fought the Monitor.

Mother Can't Be an Indian Giver, Norfolk Court Decides

Daughter Upheld in Suit to Regain $57,000 Securities.

Norfolk, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—When a mother gives to her children, by deed of gift, anything of value, it is binding even though the donor has a change of mind or heart later on.

Such was the decision handed down by Judge A. R. Hanckel in circuit court today in a suit brought by Mrs. Blanche L. Matthews against her mother, Mrs. Sarah E. Sawyer, to regain possession of securities valued at $57,000.

The decision probably will prevent the conviction of L. P. Matthews, husband of the plaintiff, of forgery and embezzlement. Mrs. Sawyer caused Matthews' arrest on a charge of having forged her name to a deed of trust to secure a loan of $4,000. Matthews contended the transaction referred to property Mrs. Sawyer had given his wife and the court today sustained that contention.

The securities, Mrs. Matthews stated, were given her by her mother by deed of gift in 1928.

Mrs. Sawyer denied that she had ever intended to give her daughter the securities. When she signed the deed of gift, she stated, she was under the impression she was signing her will.

Judge Hanckel ruled that the deed of gift was binding, awarded the securities to Mrs. Matthews and ordered that a trustee be appointed to administer the fund and give Mrs. Sawyer all proceeds during her lifetime, after which the securities will be turned over to Mrs. Matthews.

Socialization Topic At Dental Meeting

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Discussion of the trend toward socialization of dentistry, declared to be affecting a fourth of the people through public services, was part of today's sessions of the West Virginia State Dental Society in annual convention here. Dr. Homer C. Brown, Columbus, Ohio, declared professional influences should control the course of these public services.

Dr. H. S. Barr, of Charleston, was elected president; Dr. R. Mason Hite, of Mannington, president-elect; Dr. J. E. Herbert, of Martinsburg, vice president; Dr. C. G. Anderson, of Mount Hope, secretary, and Dr. John S. Stone, of Clarksburg, treasurer.

Dr. J. Ben Robinson, dean of the School of Dentistry in the University of Maryland in Baltimore, declared a definite threat of socialized medicine faces the Nation today.

Norfolk, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—W. P. Hilton has submitted his resignation as city auditor and director of finance to become effective June 1.

Tennis Choices City Tourney Victors

Latona, McLean Extended, However; Good Matches Scheduled Today.

YESTERDAY was favorites' day at the Rock Creek courts, all of the choices scoring over their less favored opponents in the City of Washington championship matches. In two encounters, however, the underdogs forced their seeded opponents to play an extra set to gain victory.

Morgan Jacob, Georgetown University netman, extended Anthony Latona to a 6—4, 5—7, 6—0 match before going down, while Tom Moorhead forced Jock McLean to pull up from 3—5 in the third set to gain a 2—6, 6—4, 7—5 victory.

In women's singles, Mrs. Mary Deck, playing in her first tournament, scored a creditable win over Corinne Frazier, 6—1, 7—5.

Good Matches Today.

Today's schedule brings together Guido Conill, who upset Tom Mangan on Sunday, and the steady-playing Maj. J. A. Dorst, of the Army-Navy Country Club. Other feature matches find Bud Markey who is making a comeback this year opposing Nathan Ritzenberg and Bill Buchanan facing Hy Ritzenberg.

Results of yesterday's play:

Men's Singles—Latona defeated Jacobs, 6—1, 5—7, 6—0; Crowley defeated Silva, 7—5, 6—3; McLean defeated Moorhead, 2—6, 6—4, 7—5; Garber defeated Boyd, 6—2, 6—4.

Men's Doubles—Ladd-Herrick defeated Howard-Morris, 7—5, 6—4; Latona-Gravem defeated Deck-O'Neil, 6—4, 4—6, 7—5; Gould-Ritzenberg defeated Tomelden-Burwell, 6—1, 6—4.

Women's Singles—Tew Defeated Colladay, 6—2, 4—6, 7—5; Basset defeated Atkins, 6—1, 6—3; Deck defeated Frazier, 6—1, 7—5; McCullough won from Fain by default; Tabler defeated Graham, 6—1, 6—1; Miller defeated Whitfield, 6—2, 6—3.

Today's Schedule.

Men's Singles—5 p. m., McElvenny vs. Baker, H. Ritzenberg vs. Buchanan, Conili vs. Dorst, Markey vs. N. Ritzenberg, Mitchell vs. Collins, Deck vs. Howard.

Men's Doubles—5 p. m., Ladd-Herrick vs. Johnsen-Trigg; 6 p. m., Grant-Krause vs. Dorst-Blade.

Women's Singles—3 p. m., Keyser vs. Cochran; 4 p. m., Moore vs. Tew, Martines vs. McCullough, Cravem vs. Butler, Basset vs. Deck; 5:30 p. m., Ryan vs. Wood.

The Bookies Take Up Golf

By Jimmy Powers

(Pinch Hitting for Gallico).

NEW YORK, May 21 (Spl.).—The gamboleers who have fairly shrewd opinions of the relative speed of hayburners, the socking of belligerent boxers and the disc-stopping merits of padded hockey goalies have invaded the royal and ancient game. With the United States open golf championship scheduled to begin at Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, on June 7, the books are establishing prices on the crack contestants. This is, perhaps, a better way of doping an event for the sharks are seldom camped behind that No. 8 ball at the pay-off.

Densmore Shute, Johnny Goodman, Paul Runyan, Craig Wood, Horton Smith and Gene Sarazen are leading the pack in the spring book. They are rated 10-1, which means they are top heavy favorites in a field where at least 50 good professionals and amateurs will be clipping par.

Shute, the 1933 British open champion, has gone back to his old shafts and has regained his old scoring ranges. When he won the British crown he signed up with a sporting goods house and changed his tools. At the advice of his former partner, Eddie Williams, he put the new clubs back in his leather sack and is out touring the Philadelphia fairways in close to par.

Runyan was the leading money winner of the winter circuit. He cruised the fairways of California, went to Florida and kept humming along under the palm trees. Then he came North by way of Pinehurst. It is figured that he averaged nearly $2 for each sock he took at the ball. He is not stylish, but he wins. You can't get around that.

Horton Smith won the master's tournament at Augusta in the big ballyhoo for Bobby Jones' first business venture into the amusement field. In licking Jones he repeated his last triumph in Georgia. Horton has been playing very well, and many hunch players figure he is due to take the open as he will face practically the same field.

Goodman is the type of golfer who plays himself into shape. The Walker Cup matches and competition in the British open ought to bring his game along to a point where "The Champ," as his pals call him, may repeat. That would be quite a novelty and a story. Phil Perkins, Bobby Cruickshank, MacDonald Smith, even Walter Hagen, are other shots liked in the books. They run from 15 to 1 up to 50 to 1.

The course at Merion is short and there are bets that 66 will be broken. Par is 36—34—70.

French Seaman, Suicide, Is Buried

Annapolis, Md., May 21 (Spl.).—Eugene J. J. Cortois, chief petty officer of the French training cruiser Jeanne d'Arc, who committed suicide by hanging aboard ship late Saturday, was buried today in the Naval Cemetery here.

French officers and petty officers and a firing squad of 16 bluejackets marched from the Naval Hospital to the cemetery nearby. Services were conducted by Father Pierra, chaplain of the Jeanne d'Arc.

The body will be exhumed in about 15 days to be conveyed back to France aboard the Jeanne d'Arc when she completes her visit to New York. She will sail from here for New York tomorrow.

Cortois was a native of L'Orient, France.

AN EMPLOYMENT CONSULTANT

Will be glad to talk with a few men about a new, permanent business opening for several men in and around Washington.

If you are out of a job and looking for a good steady position where the income is all right, you and your family a good living and enable you to lay up some savings for a rainy day, you are the man we would like to talk to.

Earnings from start should be from $35 to $75 per week. Grow rapidly from that point. PROMOTIONS AS EARNED.

Our company employs men (white) from all walks of life—CARPENTERS, BRICKLAYERS, ELECTRICIANS, life insurance, paper, milk, and laundry ROUTE MEN, lawyers, doctors, merchants. All that we ask is a fair education, a good appearance, a strong body and ambition and a will to work hard. The method is so easy that you can do this work, and the company's manner of helping you get started makes it easy for the average man to make good. MEN WHO ARE NOW EMPLOYED NEED NOT APPLY. For a time we are only interested in men who are READY TO GO TO WORK AT ONCE.

Men who have had SPECIALTY SELLING TRAINING AND EXPERIENCE are NOT FITTED for this employment and need not apply. This consultant will be in Washington Wednesday morning, May 23 only. He will see men who can qualify promptly at 9:30 o'clock a. m. Come prepared to spend at least two hours looking into every phase of this business. Doors will be closed at 9:45, as there must be no interruptions after the conference starts. Address of conference—Room 738, 1511 K st. nw.

Remember, this invitation is only for men who are AVAILABLE FOR IMMEDIATE EMPLOYMENT. Must also be able to give good references.

THE SKILL THAT BROUGHT A DISCOURAGING REWARD OF TROUBLE IN ONE CASE, WAS FOCUSED ON A PERSONAL PROBLEM, AS TWO DETECTIVES PREPARED TO OPEN A SAFE AS EASILY AS IT HAS BEEN DONE BY UNINVITED AFTER-DARK VISITORS.
IT WAS ALL VERY SIMPLE. I KNEW THIS PAPER WITH CHEMICAL NAMES ON IT MEANT NUMBERS. THEN MY DRUGGIST SUGGESTED THAT I LOOK UP WHAT HE CALLED THE ATOMIC NUMBERS OF IODINE, BISMUTH, AND SO FORTH.
HERE, YOU READ 'EM.
RIGHT 2 IODINE.... 18..53. NOW TRY THE HANDLE, HERMAN.
OPEN! AND IT'S FULL OF STUFF....JEWELRY, SILVERWARE, AND SO FORTH.
MY WORD! WHAT...? OH OH...LISTEN HERMAN, DID YOU HEAR SOMETHING?
OH HELLO YOU CADS!
MAJOR AMBUSH! LISTEN, WHAT'S THE IDEA OF YOU WALKING INTO OUR OFFICE WITHOUT EVEN KNOCKING OR...?
YES, WE'RE VERY BUSY RIGHT NOW AND....
LISTEN, BEFORE I AGAIN ASK YOU NOT TO TELL SIBYL ANYTHING ABOUT MY LOST MEMORY, SUPPOSE YOU TELL ME WHERE YOU GOT A SAFEFUL OF WHAT IS CLEARLY BURGLARY SOUVENIRS.

Iron Ships.

It was John Laird, his hands on hips, who stood and boosted iron ships. He said they would be twice as good as any vessels built of wood; they'd cross the ocean or they'd streak along the bosom of a creek. But skeptics jeered and cried, "You gink, an iron ship would surely sink, and every delegate on deck would have to swim to save his neck." This was a hundred years ago, and skeptics journeyed to and fro, and wiped the foam from jeering lips, and joked about the iron ships. But some there were who liked the scheme, and thought it not a bughouse dream. And so a metal ship was built, which proved its value to the hilt. This first one was a British boat, and when it safely was afloat, America put in a bid—she wanted boats that wouldn't skid. So Britain built an iron barge for those blamed Yankees, stanch and large, then tore the vessel all apart, and shipped it to our teeming mart, where busy and aggressive men soon built the brave ship up again. And this fair land was full of gents who wouldn't wager 7 cents that any iron ship would float; they stood and watched and lost their goat. Now iron ships go everywhere, both in the ocean and the air, and wooden ships are out of date, and so we pause to celebrate.

What You Have Been Wondering About Lupe Velez, in Town for a Brief Week

Mexican Star Scores Hit as Comedienne

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Just what is Lupe Valez like? Well, I'll tell you. She is more or less—mostly more—like having a bunch of firecrackers set off in your hand when you're not looking!

I mean to say that Saturday night when I went backstage to see for myself just how dynamic, as the saying goes, this young woman is, I found out that she is and then some.

There can be no overdoing the personal appeal of this electric young woman. She is charged with dynamite—precisely in the manner that Al Jolson and Jimmy Durante are.

When she is out on that stage she is giving of everything she has. And that runs into a serious drain on the nervous system. So serious, as a matter of fact, that Lupe has been told by her physicians that she can not work more than four weeks of personal appearances at a time without serious consequences. This is a little hard to reconcile with season-long runs of such stage hits as "Strike Me Pink," but still it must stand. The medicos will not take no for an answer.

Ostrich Plumes.

However, that is all apart from the immediate impression conveyed by Senorita Valez. All done up in her ostrich plumes, she is panicking houses at the Fox. That is as it should be. Senorita—and since she is married to Johnny Weissmuller, she should be known as Senorita Weissmuller—is a show stopper. The swim champ could be miles away from here and Lupe would still be star of everything that is on view. She has "It" and Johnny can do the best he can.

The "best he can," however, does not preclude mention of the fact that may have been done full justice in the sports department that Johnny did rather well for himself on a local golf course recently with a 78. But Lupe is what she is still pleased to call a golf widow.

There is only a fortnight of the tour that has been marked for these two this year. Lupe has been given the word by her doctors. That is enough.

17,000-Mile Tour.

Katharine Cornell will end her 17,000-mile tour of the United States and Canada in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, N. Y., on Wednesday night, June 20, in Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." This will be her only appearance in Greater New York this season. She will not present her production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" or her revival of G. Bernard Shaw's "Candida," both of which she has acted on the road this year, in the vicinity of Manhattan, until next winter. Miss Cornell and her husband, Guthrie McClintic, sail for their summer holiday on the S. S. Exeter on June 28.

Wednesday Opening.

On top of its Wednesday opening of the current Irene Dunne-Richard Dix picture, "Stingaree," RKO Keith's will again bring in its new picture on a Wednesday. In this instance the photoplay is the most recent Radio Picture, "Finishing School," featuring Frances Dee, Ginger Rogers, Bruce Cabot, Billie Burke and John Halliday.

A new sort of heroine is presented in "Finishing School," which shows her as a victim of a so-called smart boarding school. The play involves the trying plight of a young girl who is a student in a profiteering school operated by a snobbish, hypocritical woman whose two gods are money and "face." Ill-advised and neglected by her society-mad mother, she becomes involved in a romance with a young medical interne.

Raft's Heart.

Virginia Pine's entry into films was by accident.

She is the Chicago socialite who is said to be George Raft's current heart interest. Recently she was signed to a term contract by the Warner Bros.-First National studios, with the understanding that she is to be cast in a series of roles of gradually increasing importance until she is prepared for leading roles.

Daughter of a wealthy clothing manufacturer, Miss Pine was married to a son of the Lehmanns, owners of one of Chicago's greatest department stores. It was the breakup of this marriage which brought her to Hollywood some months ago for a rest and a change of scene.

"Motion picture acting was as remote from my thoughts as a flying trip to the moon," she said, explaining how she "went Hollywood." "I had come here with my 2-year-old daughter with no other thought than having a rest and some relaxation.

Speaking Personality.

"Buddy de Sylva, the director, whom I had met socially, learned that I was here, and invited me to a studio to watch the making of a picture. When I got out on the set, he coaxed me into playing the role of an extra. Just for the fun and thrill of the thing, I accepted. The studio publicity department learned about it, and much to my amazement I read in the newspapers that I was seeking fame as an actress!"

But the unexpected publicity did plant the acting idea in her head, and when a film agent spoke to her about making a screen test, with the object of undertaking a screen career, she agreed. She made the test, and the agent displayed it to all the studios. The result was no less than four offers of contracts. She chose to sign with Warner Brothers-First National. Her first assignment was a small role in "Doctor Monica," with Kay Francis.

Miss Pine is a pale blonde, with a rosy complexion, much poise and unmistakable culture. She wears clothes with marked elegance. And, it is said by the studio people, she has manifested real acting ability. On that point, however, the newcomer is extremely modest.

More Personal.

"I realize that I have a great deal to learn about acting," she said, "but I am willing, and prepared, to work hard. Maybe, if they will be patient with me, I eventually will do something worth while. What I do not want, however, is to be rushed too fast, to be assigned to play roles of importance before I'm able to handle them capably."

Working is a new and a welcome experience to her, Miss Pine says. Twenty-three years old, she has been married twice—the first time on the very night of her coming out party as a debutante.

"I've had enough of matrimony for a while," says she, speaking of her friendship with George Raft. "I want to work now. George is a good friend, and I'm very fond of him, but any talk of our marriage is altogether premature."

Yes, it was hot yesterday.

Gayety

"LOVELY LILLIES." Hirst-Lake production, featuring Hap Freyer and Rita Zane, with Mary Brown, Lillian Harrison, Evelyn Murray, Boots Rush, James X. Francis, Johnny Crosby, Johnny Cook, Max Forman, and Milt Bronson. Staged by Frank Bryant. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Burlesque in general may be composed of girls, but "Lovely Lillies" is quite a man show—and that man is Hap Freyer. The "Number Two" comedian of burlesque returns to town with a new batch of sketches and, through them, carries a show that maintains the Gayety's high seasonal average.

Assisting Freyer in a bit of pastiming that leans heavily to the male side are Johnny Crosby and Max Forman, with Jesse X. Francis and Johnny Cook doing the straight parts. Milt Bronson warbles and steps a mean Cossack routine.

On the distaff side, Rita Zane has the ace spot, with Mary Brown, Lillian Harrison and Evelyn Murray completing the roster of artistes, whose charms are not undisclosed secrets. "Boots" Rush is seen as the soubrette.

The unusually small number in the cast this week forces many duplications in casting—and to the greater interest in the performance, creating as it does a more intimate feelings between stage and audience.

The doubling goes on also on the other side of the company, with Messrs. Francis and Cook adding their voices to various song and dance numbers. In that connection, the "Old Homestead Quartette"—Crosby, Cook, Francis, Freyer—and its gradual diminution to the "Old Homestead Once" is reenacted and it is just as hilarious as ever.

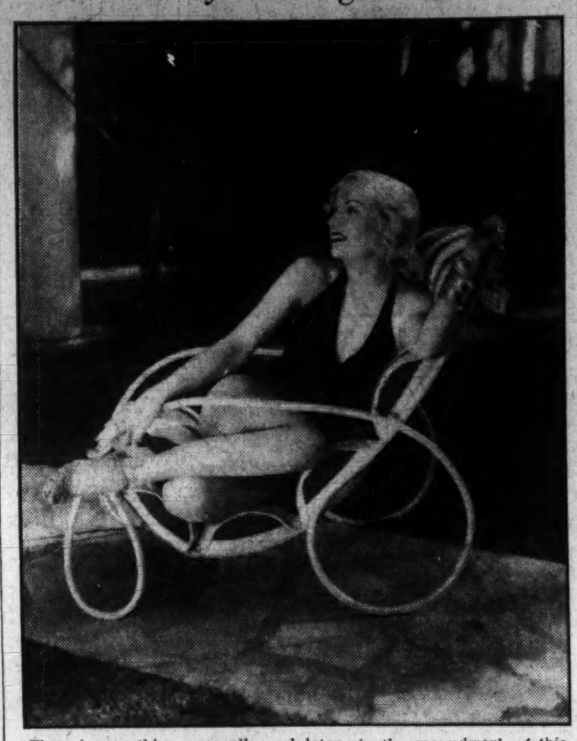
What a Funny Looking Beach Chair!



There is something unusually undulatory in the groundwork of this beach chair that is a trifle hard to explain. This, however, may not be said to extend to Carole Lombard, who is as self-explanatory as any one can be rendered by the modern bathing suit. Miss Lombard is one of the more expository actress, having been posed lately in numerous cinemas of the first rank.

Straight From the Studios

Virginia Pine Is to Become Mrs. Virginia Pine Raft; Robots to Be Given Screen Tests on Coast; Gossip From Hollywood Boulevard.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, May 20.—Her marriage to George Raft a probability the coming fall, and her rift with Warner Brothers studio healed, Virginia Pine was looking positively blooming today, when we chatted with her at the hospital where she is recovering from an illness.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

"George and I want to get a house before we marry," she said. "In the meantime I'm looking for two houses; one for George, with a swimming pool, on which he insists, and a small one for myself and my little daughter. We can use George's swimming pool," she sparkled.

A wire arrived from Raft while we were chatting, a wire full of sweet nothings and loving good wishes for her health. The actor is in the East on a personal appearance tour. She showed us a handsome gold locket, containing her own and her baby's pictures, the gift recently of Raft.

"That was bad luck I had about my Warner contract," said Virginia. "You see I wasn't working, and I had to go to Chicago on business. I was so near New York, I thought I'd just go on. And the very first person I met there was Jack Warner. Warners suspended my contract and my pay, but it's all right now."

Warner Brothers have just exercised Miss Pine's option. She may be loaned to Paramount for a role soon.

Trying Out Robots.

Why, after all, shouldn't a robot have a chance in pictures? That's how M-G-M seem to feel about it, with the result that all robots between the ages of—but, pshaw, I forgot, robots don't have ages. Anyway, M-G-M is planning to test all the robots that can be rounded up in southern California. The mechanical man must pass camera and microphone tests.

Several are to be used in "Sasha Gerhard," which is an adaptation of the play "The Singing Rabbi."

Danville Music Leader Will Get Testimonial

Danville, May 21 (Spl.).—Miss Louise Paulsen, who for 19 years has been identified with the music departments of Danville colleges, will receive a testimonial tomorrow afternoon at Stratford College.

She is resigning at the end of the present session to return to Sweden, where she was born.

Flying Visit Paid Baltimore by Lyon And Bebe Daniels

Baltimore, May 21 (Spl.).—Ben Lyon, Hollywood movie actor, who was born in Baltimore, and his actress-wife, Bebe Daniels, paid a flying visit to Baltimore yesterday.

For Lyon, the visit was in reality a flying one. He has a commercial pilot's license, and soon after he and his wife reached the city, he left the home of relatives, and went to the Curtiss-Wright Airport, where he chartered a plane.

Retired Railway Engineer Is Dead

Angus Workman Employed by N. & W. 40 Years.

Luray, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Angus Workman, 70, for 40 years an engineer on the N. & W. Railway, whose engine cab became too small for him to enter, died last night at his home in Shenandoah, near here.

Four sisters and five brothers survive.

Growing in weight, for a number of years caused him to relinquish his job as engineer. Later he was given a yard engine at Shenandoah. He had to give up this job, too, as the yard engine cab became too small.

He weighed more than 300 pounds. Burial will take place tomorrow in Rockingham County.

Postmaster Takes Over Office June 1

The new postmaster, a Democrat, will succeed Leslie W. Gaver, Republican, who resigned at the request of the Postoffice Department in view of his candidacy for register of wills at the fall election. Gaver's term would not have expired until December.

Holter, a well-known farmer, has long been identified in politics in Middletown. He is a brother of John W. Holter, president of the county commissioners, and M. Frank Holter, president of the Farmers Cooperative Association.

Bank Stockholders Assessed $300,000

Norfolk, Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Judgments totaling approximately $300,000 against 86 shareholders in the defunct First National Bank of Portsmouth were handed down in Federal Court here today.

The action, brought by Joseph A. Gamble, receiver of the bank, at the instruction of the Comptroller General, is being tried before a jury at the request of the defendants, but in each instance Federal Judge Luther B. Way is directing a verdict.

Striking back from another angle, many of the stockholders are fighting against the assessments in State courts. The matter is now before the Virginia Supreme Court.

Nurses School Has Three Graduates

Cambridge, Md., May 21 (Spl.).—Misses Mary Alice Nichols and Myra P. Jones, of Hurlock, and Madeline V. Booze, of Hoopersville, will be graduated from the Cambridge-Maryland Hospital Training School for Nurses on Thursday night.

Dr. Guy Steele, chief of staff, will present the diplomas, and the address to the graduates will be given by the Rev. O. B. Newton, pastor of Grace M. E. Church South.

On Wednesday night the alumnae will give a banquet to the graduates and senior nurses. The baccalaureate sermon will be preached Sunday by the Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Mulligan in St. Paul's M. P. Church.

Auto Inspection Deadline Nears

Richmond, May 21 (Spl.).—Of the 254,889 automobiles now licensed in Virginia, only 87,815 have been inspected for mechanical defects, with only ten days remaining before the inspection deadline, it was learned today. It will be unlawful to operate an uninspected car after May 31.

It was announced by the motor vehicle division of the NRA code provisions will prevent the 800 inspection stations staying open all night for the benefit of delinquents.

Baltimore Session Begun by Greeters

Baltimore, May 21 (Spl.).—More than 400 members of the International Hotel Greeters of America gathered here today for the organization's annual convention. By tomorrow it is expected between 1,200 and 1,500 delegates will be here.

The visitors were welcomed by city officials and by officers of the hotel men's organization and its auxiliary at the opening session.

Girl, 5, Badly Hurt When Struck by Car

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 21 (Spl.).—Louise Price, 5, was brought to a hospital today from her home in Shepherdstown where she received fractures of the hip and collarbone when struck by an automobile.

The driver of the car, Calvin Alder, said the child dodged from behind a parked car.

Tomorrow will be Ohio Day in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. North Dakota will be next.

MORE than 150 employes in the Emergency Crop Loan Office at FCA are confronted with the problem of whether to give up their homes or jobs here when that office is moved to Memphis, Tenn., on June 15. Some will have to give up both, as Homer Peele, regional manager, announces in an office memorandum: "No definite statement as to the number of the present personnel who will be required to complete the organization" has been given in the consolidation with the Memphis Regional Office.

BAKER

Employes are requested to indicate on a questionnaire whether they will be available for duty in Memphis if they are called. Oral warnings to the personnel accompanied the memoranda and questionnaires "not to give any information whatever to the press under penalty of immediate discharge."

When the decision was reached to begin demolition of Temporary Building C on June 15, Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, and Senator Smith, of South Carolina, began a fight to get the office transferred to their States. McKellar wanted the office placed in Memphis, and Smith wanted it in Columbia. The former, of course, won.

The second of a series of summer pair games will be held tonight at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest under auspices of the Federal Bridge League. Play will begin at 8 o'clock. Sterling league seals will be awarded as prizes, Isaac H. York (*), Treasury, league president, announces.

Relaxation and recreation are found by Dr. E. W. Sheets (*), chief of Animal Husbandry Division, Agriculture, at his home, Trenholme Gardens, College Park, Md. His iris gardens are now in full bloom and attract many visitors daily.

J. H. Merchant, examiner, is probably the champion commuter of the Patent Office. Every morning he rides in from Manassas, Va., and back in the afternoon for a total of more than 80 miles daily.

Discussion of membership work featured the May meeting of Bureau of Standards Local, No. 260, N. F. F. E. A. C. Edwards, chairman of the District Federation membership committee, told of the spirited work being done throughout the District, emphasizing the health service and credit unions of the N. F. F. E. as outstanding services.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Copyright Office, Library of Congress, at the garden party given by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House to women in executive positions in the Government included:

Mrs. Lilla A. Shepley, chief of Division of Records and Assignments; Mrs. Maude C. Brady (*), chief of Coordination Section, and Mrs. Iredell P. Rafter, chief of Certificate Division.

The California State Society will meet Saturday night in the auditorium of the Interior Building to adopt a permanent constitution. A program of entertainment is being arranged to accompany the business session, Mrs. Gertrude Scott, secretary-treasurer, announces. California motion pictures will be shown and a member of Congress will deliver an address.

IN the final issue of the George Washington Law Review all articles have been written by students of the University Law School and the volume includes numerous stories by Federal employes. The issue is dedicated to the student board of associate editors.

"Legal Status of Liquor Trade-Marks and Trade Names Since Repeal" is the leading article, written by Robert S. Milans, Patent Office, coauthor with Frederick F. Mack.

Albert C. Johnston, also of Patent Office, wrote "Governmental Limitations on Oil Production."

H. Leigh Ronning, Library of Congress, contributed "The Processing Tax as a Public Purpose."

"'Willfulness' and Lack of 'Good Faith' as Elements of Federal Tax Crimes," was written by Earl C. Crouter, Justice.

The student work is of an unusually high order, according to Prof. John Albert McIntire, of the law faculty, and editor in chief of the Review.

The George Washington Law Review is said to be the legal periodical in the country devoted exclusively to governmental and Federal public law. It is edited by Prof. McIntire, assisted by a faculty editorial board, the student board of associate editors and the advisory board of four legal experts. Serving on the advisory board now are Clyde Aitchison, Interstate Commerce Commissioner; James Oliver Murdock, State; Charles Warren, former Assistant Attorney General and L. Hall Sutton, prominent patent attorney.

"I am a Beautician"

WHAT DO DR. M. W. LOCKE Shoes mean to me?

When a beautician gives advice to other women she must know how to keep up her own appearance as well. She knows that nothing etches lines into the face more surely than badly lasted, uncomfortable shoes. Most women walk badly: they slump, slope, strut, teeter or lope . . . the backbone is crooked . . . and naturally circulation is poor and the complexion dim and muddy. A famous beauty specialist once said: "If women would spend more money on their feet they could spend less money on facials!" My advice is: Get into Dr. Locke Shoes for health and a young look!

LA SALLE in White $10.50
